

Lindsay Captures Youthful Voters in Arizona

By MICHAEL J. PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York won strong support from newly enfranchised youthful voters to surprise analysts and capture the runner-up position in Arizona's state delegate election, the first ballot-box test of contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Lindsay ran second to acknowledged front-runner Edmund S. Muskie of Maine in the state's election of 500 delegates to the Arizona Democratic convention next month. The 500 will choose 25 delegates to represent Arizona at the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach next July.

The 36,000 voting Democrats gave the Maine senator 38 per cent of the delegates, Lindsay 24 per cent and Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota 20 per cent, with 17 per cent of the delegates uncommitted.

McGovern and Lindsay both led Muskie in the two university precincts in Tucson and Tempe, where the student body presidents of the University of Arizona and Arizona State both endorsed Lindsay.

Lindsay also showed strength among minority groups and carried Phoenix, the largest city. He and McGovern led Muskie in Tucson, which with Phoenix comprises 75 per cent of the state's voters.

In a statement from Wisconsin, where he was campaigning for farm votes, Lindsay said Sunday the Arizona delegate election demonstrates "an underdog like myself who is starting late can win" the party's presidential nomination.

"We seem to have surprised a lot of people," he added, referring to pre-election reports that he would get only a handful of delegates.

When the complicated count was completed Sunday, Muskie had 189 delegates, Lindsay 118, McGovern 102, with 85 uncommitted. Sens. Henry M. Jackson of Washington and Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota received two each, although they had urged their supporters to back the uncommitted slate.

Sen. Vance Hartke of Indiana and Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York got one each.

All the major Democratic contenders had campaigned for Arizona's delegates, but Lindsay conducted the most extensive effort with speeches throughout the state and broadcast commercials and billboards claiming "Arizona likes a fighter."

In another political development Sunday the congressional Black Caucus announced plans to hold the first national black political convention in Gary, Ind., March 10-12.

Rep. Charles C. Diggs, D-Mich., caucus chairman, said the convention will seek to "crystallize strategies for maximum practical unity in the national participation of blacks in the Democratic and Republican conventions and in local, state and national elections this year."

Activities of the candidates Sunday included:

HUMPHREY—The former vice president told Florida Jaycees in Daytona Beach, "I do not want a government that can do everything for me because I know that a government that can do everything for me can do anything to me."

"I believe in street-level government ... Washington should be looked upon to set some minimum standards and guidelines, not firm structures."

JACKSON—The Washington senator told a news conference in Atlanta, Ga., President Nixon plans to use his trips to Moscow and Peking and "every device under the sun to divert attention from the economic mess here at home."

Calling himself a spokesman for the Democratic party's "progressive center," Jackson said he is stressing some of the same themes as Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama "but in an entirely different way."

WALLACE—The governor accused President Nixon of breaking campaign promises to balance the budget, stop school busing, lower taxes and continue U.S. refusal to recognize mainland China.

Irish In Retaliation For Slain Civilians

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army retaliated with bombs and the Irish Republic summoned home its ambassador in Britain today on the heels of the killing of 13 civilians in a battle with British army troops in Londonderry.

An announcement by the Irish government of Prime Minister Jack Lynch in the south said the Dublin Cabinet is satisfied that British troops opened an unprovoked attack on unarmed civilians Sunday in the Roman Catholic Bogside district of Londonderry.

Lynch's government also launched a campaign for an international inquiry into the killings.

Lynch announced the action after a hastily called Cabinet meeting. He said his foreign minister, Patrick Hillery will go to New York for talks with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim. Hillery will also visit "heads of friendly governments" to explain the Irish government's position in a bid to set up an international inquiry into the shootings.

In London, the British government announced it would start an independent inquiry into the shootings.

Lynch called for an immediate withdrawal of the troops from Londonderry, cessation of the "harassment of the minority population," the ending of internment without trial in Northern Ireland, and a declaration of intent by the British government to achieve a final solution of the Irish question by calling a conference for that purpose.

Lynch said he told British Prime Minister Edward Heath Sunday night that a very critical point had been reached in Northern Ireland. Lynch said his government hoped that at this stage the only hope was that the British government would take firm political action on the lines

Dublin had been advocating for so long.

This action related to internment, responsibility for security forces in Northern Ireland and the continuing existence of the Protestant-dominated Parliament in its present form.

Lynch's decision to call home Ambassador Donal O'Sullivan from London does not mean a break in diplomatic relations between British and the predominantly Roman Catholic Irish Republic.

"This is the strongest protest we can make," an Irish Embassy spokesman in London said.

Northern Ireland is a British province, officially known as Ulster.

The retaliation of the Irish Republican Army came with the bombing of a store, a bar and an electrical shop in downtown Belfast.

The British Home Stores was blown up by two gelignite bombs in a window cleaners' van that was parked just outside the store in a busy shopping arcade.

Ten persons were injured, one seriously, and dozens of neighboring shops and offices were damaged.

The 13 deaths in Londonderry raised to 232 the number of persons killed in the Catholic-Protestant warfare that has raged in Northern Ireland since August 1969. Fifty-nine have died this year.

The IRA charged that the paratroopers fired indiscriminately into a crowd of unarmed civilians, and the guerrillas promised a wave of soldier killings in revenge.

The army said snipers opened fire first.

Thousands of Catholic workers went on strike in Londonderry today in response to a call from IRA leaders for a mourning period.

The big industrial complex at Maydown, just outside the city, produced a small fraction of its normal output, and many of the factories shut down. Most of the city's 5,000 shirt workers stayed home, and many shops closed in the center of the tense, nervous city.

Catholics gathered at St. Eugene's Cathedral for a requiem Mass, and their bishop, the Rev. Neal Farren, appealed for restraint. The funerals of those killed Sunday will probably be held Wednesday, and there may be more violence then.

For State Senate

Billboard Action Near

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Two perennial problems of the Missouri legislature are awaiting action this week as lawmakers return for the fourth full week of the four-month 1972 session.

The senate was to tackle the controversial Billboard Bill at 4 p.m. today in an attempt to come up with an acceptable plan that would persuade the Federal Highway Administration to restore $11.5 million in road funds. The monies are being withheld because Missouri's current laws on outdoor advertising along major highways don't measure up to federal requirements.

And the house apportionment committee will make another attempt to come up with a congressional redistricting proposal that will satisfy the federal courts that the new districts will be nearly equal in population.

A special three-judge federal panel in Kansas City is holding its final hearing the same day. If the legislature fails to enact a new redistricting measure, the courts will have to do the job.

The senate apportionment committee has been deliberating for two weeks on one redistricting proposal, but apparently has hit a snag. Its chairman called off a meeting slated for today.

The so-called "Billboard Bill" is expected to trigger lengthy debate shortly after the senate convenes.

Sen. William J. Cason, D-Clinton, majority floor leader, said he expects action on the bill today and is prepared to give the measure a full airing, even if it cuts into the supper hour.

The house appropriations committee, which has completed hearings on 1972-73 budget requests, is expected to go into its massive files and testimony to begin hammering out its version of the fiscal plan.

The budget bills could be ready for floor action late in the week, but the following week is considered more likely.

Rep. E. J. "Lucky" Cantrell, D-Overland, house appropriations chairman, said the committee is faced with some difficult decisions due to limited revenues available, and might be forced to make some sharp cuts in funds recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes for some state agencies.

February

Commodity Funds Set

The County Court has agreed to pay 20 per cent of the administrative and warehouse costs for February for the Pettis County commodity food distribution program, according to Perry Edde, director. He said the Court will inform him by Feb. 10 about the program's standing in relation to the new county budget.

The budget will be discussed at a public hearing at 9 a.m. Tuesday at the County Court.

Judge E. L. "Red" Birdsong told The Democrat-Capital that the Court will pay its 20 per cent share "on a month-to-month basis as long as we have the money." He pointed out that his expenditure is not listed in the 1972 budget although it will have to come out of the general revenue amount designated "surplus." He said the court did not want to specify a budget for commodity food "because if we do, we'll be compelled to pay."

Edde said he did not know what would be the future of the food program. He said "as far as it stands now, it will be closed up" if the county subsidy is withdrawn. "They've been very good to us and we hope they will continue the subsidy," he said.

In January 2,290 Pettis Countians received food from the Commodity Distribution Center, according to Edde. That figure represents 869 of the 938 county families that are eligible to receive commodity food, he said.

He said that food will be distributed at the center from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Feb. 4 and 7 through 10, and from 8 a.m. to noon Feb. 14 through 17.

Westmoreland Sees Renewed Enemy Life

SAIGON (AP) — Gen. William C. Westmoreland said today that North Vietnam is preparing for a major offensive next month just below the demilitarized zone and in South Vietnam's central highlands. He said that after a week's visit to the war zone, he is confident the South Vietnamese can handle any enemy threat.

The U.S. Army chief of staff told a news conference the North Vietnamese could conceivably "have some temporary success, but I think it would be quite temporary."

"I think the (South) Vietnamese are in a posture that they can react, so that any successes would be temporary," Westmoreland continued. "My feeling is that the plans of the (South) Vietnamese and their military strength are of such magnitude that the enemy would suffer very heavy casualties."

Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam from 1965 through early 1968, said the senior South Vietnamese officials with whom he met "have a great deal of confidence that they can handle any forthcoming enemy initiative." He said he and the senior U.S. officers in Vietnam share this confidence.

Westmoreland said it would be difficult to judge how long any offensive might last, but "my judgment would be that this offensive will consist of several phases, each phase being in duration of days, certainly no more than a week or so."

He said the history of the war indicates that "the staying power of the enemy is not great," and because of logistic limitations he is forced to strike, then regroup, resupply and re-equip before striking again.

The chief of staff said he believes Hanoi's objectives may be similar to those of the big 1968 Tet offensive, which had a dramatic psychological impact on American public opinion.

"I believe the objective is a political objective," Westmoreland declared. "Of course, the South Vietnamese are in a far stronger position than they were at the time of the Tet offensive in 1968."

Asked if the aim of the enemy offensive could be to embarrass President Nixon during his trip to Communist China starting Feb. 21, Westmoreland replied: "I think it's quite likely that such will be the case."

In Blight Losses

Class Action Suit Filed For Farmers

PRINCETON, Ind. (AP) — A class action suit on behalf of all the nation's farmers who used T-hybrid seed corn in 1970, allegedly susceptible to the Southern Corn Leaf Blight, has been filed in Gibson, Ind., Circuit Court against major seed companies having sales in excess of $500,000.

The suit contends that the companies "should have known at the time T-hybrid seed corn was sold" that it was "unusually susceptible to the blight and was also susceptible to another similar corn disease commonly called yellow leaf blight."

The blight epidemic reduced the 1970 corn yield from T-hybrid seed corn "by no less than 500 million bushels in the United States," the suit contends.

At an estimated price of $1 per bushel the suit conceivably could involve $500 million.

The Associated Press first learned of the suit Jan. 23 when about 60 farmers met at the Knox County Courthouse in Vincennes to hear William M. Osborn of the Indianapolis law firm of Bingham, Summers, Welsh & Spilman discuss plans to file. The plaintiffs in the action are represented by the Indianapolis firm, along with Klineman, Rose & Wolf of Indianapolis, Fair & Rehquist of Princeton, Ind. and Smith and Patterson of Greensboro, N.C.

Seed companies failed to warn farmers that the blight or yellow blight had been found in T-hybrid seed corn at different times and places as early as 1961, the suit claims, and they violated Title 7 of the U.S.

Code section 1551 commonly known as the Federal Seed Act in misleading advertising and labeling of the corn so as to fail to advise the plaintiffs.

The companies named as defendants in the action are Anderson, Clayton & Co., Asgrow Seed Co., Cargill, Inc., Dekalb Agresearch, Inc., Funk Brothers Seed Co., Edward J. Funk & Sons, Lowe Seed Co., Midwest Seed Growers Association, Pfister Associated Growers, Pfister Hybrid Corn Co., Pioneer Corn, Inc., Stull Brothers, Inc., Todd Hybrid Corn Co., Trojan Seed Co., all major distributors of the seed and two Southern Indiana firms, Schenk, Inc., of Knox County and the Princeton Mining Co., Inc.

The complaint also asked that all persons, firms and organizations whose names are presently unknown to plaintiffs who had sales in excess of $500,000 of the Texas Male Sterile Hybrid seed corn in the United States for the 1970 crop season be named as defendants.

The action contends that each defendant implied by warranty that all T-hybrid seed corn sold to plaintiffs for the crop season was merchantable, however, the corn seed was not merchantable in that it was unusually susceptible to the blight.

The action requests that reasonable and fair amount of damages be recovered from defendants and they have "such other and further relief as may seem just and proper to the court." No figure amount is asked in the action.

Bishop Frank Sees Action 'Necessary'

Bishop Eugene M. Frank, Missouri area bishop of the United Methodist Church, told about 225 persons Sunday afternoon at the Wesley United Methodist Church: "The church is on the edge of a great wilderness during the 1970's. Christians need to act as pioneers and dare to move into the wilderness of the secular world — a world that is fast moving farther and farther away from God."

The bishop spoke at a reception given in honor of him and his wife on the eve of his transfer to another area. The reception was given by the denomination's Sedalia district, which consists of 70 congregations.

"There are three things that stir me very deeply," the bishop said, characterizing them as "devil's work." The three things are modern man's efforts "to humanize God, to deify man and to minimize sin," he said, quoting a former editor of The Christian Century magazine.

"I covet for you and for the whole church a new understanding, a revival of our proper identification of God, a proper identification of sin and a proper identification of Satan," he said.

The way to identify God is through worship, he said. "There is no other way to come face to face with a Biblical God except through praise, prayer, confession and adoration. We must elevate God to the first place in his world and in our lives. To do anything else is to humanize God," he said.

The bishop deplored that fact that "today we have minimized sin to the extent that it no longer exists. Unless we really identify sin we're in a terrible situation," he warned.

Earlier, Dr. Thomas D. Hall, Wesley Church pastor, led the worship service.

The Rev. Edward A. Neimeyer, district superintendent, praised the bishop for his services to the Missouri area in the past 16 years. Others who expressed appreciation were Mrs. Sam Ferguson, president of the Sedalia district's Women's Society of Christian Service, and Dr. Harold Young, district lay leader.

Ann Landers

Reader Praises Ann For Talking Frankly

Dear Ann Landers: The other day my wife was reading your column and she said, "I am shocked by what Ann Landers has in the paper today. What will she come up with next?" I had read your column before she did and I knew what she was referring to. It was the letter from the young fellow who couldn't urinate in a public place. He had to have privacy. He was worried about what would happen to him when he was inducted into the Army.

Well, Ann, my heart went out to that lad because I've had the same problem all my life. I went to a doctor about it and learned that it was not such a rare thing. The slang medical term for the problem is "a bashful kidney." My wife has no idea to this day that the letter she considered "shocking" and not fit for a family newspaper is a serious problem and she has been living with a man for 35 years who still has it.

My hat is off to you for speaking out frankly about things that bother folks, even though some of the topics are not exactly drawing-room conversation. People need help, and you give it. —Newport

Dear New: I agree that some of the topics I deal with are not fit fare for drawing-room conversation but the purpose of this column is to help, not to provide polite chit-chat.

I've learned a great deal from my readers, so please be aware that while I strive to educate my readers, they also educate me. For example, I had no idea there were so many bashful kidneys around. Since that letter appeared in print I've been swamped with confessions from men who were relieved to know they weren't the only ones. Thank you for writing. Your letter gave me an opportunity to mention once again a problem that I have never seen discussed in a newspaper.

Dear Ann Landers: I am tired of hearing the "Now Generation" throwing all the blame for their unhappiness and personal hangups on their parents. It has taken me 20 years to realize that parents are people and they have hangups and problems, just as we do.

Why do we expect perfection from parents when we don't expect it from ourselves or our peers? Parents are products of their environment and their inherited characteristics, just as we are. It is unfair to demand that they be infallible.

My parents have made some mistakes with me, but then their parents made mistakes with them, and I'll make mistakes with my children. But I have come to believe that a lot of unhappy, messed-up kids would rather blame their parents than take responsibility for themselves. I didn't like some of the things in my life that were making me miserable so I went to work and changed them. It's not easy to give up one's neurosis, but I did it and now I'm a much happier person. I enjoy a comfortable and honest relationship with my parents which was impossible five years ago. Sign me —

Five Are Killed In Kansas Traffic

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
At least five persons were killed in Kansas traffic accidents over the weekend.

A Kansas City, Kan. couple were killed Sunday in a two-car crash in Wyandotte County. Daniel L. Troutman, 20, and Miss Rita M. Justice, 17, were pronounced dead at Bethany Hospital, Kansas City, Kan. Police said Troutman's car apparently slid on sand that had been placed there during a recent snow. His car collided with a second vehicle.

Killed Saturday were:

Elvyn E. Mitchell, 56, La-Harpe, Kan., killed in a two-car accident on a county road northeast of Yates Center.

Johnnie W. Roeser, 53, Franklin, Kan., in a two-car accident south of Pittsburg on U.S. 69; and Thomas F. Neal, 22, in a two-car accident northwest of Junction City on K-57. Neal was stationed at Ft. Riley, Kan.

HAS ENOUGH DOCTORS

LONDON (AP) — Britain's National Health Service employed 21,709 family doctors in 1970—the biggest number since the service was begun in 1948. The Health Department said that for the first time, it appears to have recruited enough doctors to handle problems created by the population explosion.

No 'Kansas Day' Surprises

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Kansas Day, the traditional time in an election year for Republican candidates to make public their plans to seek office, has come and gone with only one formal disclosure and it entirely expected.

Sen. James B. Pearson, who has represented Kansas in the U.S. Senate since 1962 and is Kansas' senior senator, make it official Saturday he is a candidate for re-election to his second full six-year term.

Other candidates were inhibited from making any announcements perhaps because of the uneasiness about what the current legislative session holds in store for some of the would-be candidates.

Samuel Jackson, assistant secretary of Housing and Urban Development, who had been rumored to be eyeing the 2nd District congressional race against Democratic incumbent Dr. Bill Roy, said he might be a candidate in the future, but for now he plans to remain the No. 3 man in HUD. The former Topeka attorney has been in Washington three years.

Morgan Williams, Kansas director of the Farmers Home Administration, is another potential Republican candidate in the 2nd District. But he had nothing to say over Kansas Day.

The three most prominently mentioned potential GOP governor candidates are Lt. Gov. Reynolds Shultz, former Gov. John Anderson Jr. and state Rep. Morris Kay, House majority leader from Lawrence.

Shultz and Kay had campaign-type literature and paraphernalia much in evidence at the Ramada Inn downtown in Topeka the headquarters for Republican Kansas Day activities but neither made any announcement.

Both are expected now to wait until after the legislative session to see what the mood of the public is toward legislators in general and them in particular. While Shultz no longer is technically a member of the legislature, he serves as president of the Senate in his office of lieutenant governor, and is closely identified by many people with the Senate, since he formerly served in the upper chamber.

Anderson said he likely will reach a decision early this week on what he plans to do. Anderson is believed leaning heavily toward making the governor race in an effort to break the legislative-executive stalemate in Kansas government, but indicated late last week he has not completely made up his mind.

Another potential GOP governor candidate, banker Robert Gadberry of Wichita, was president of the Kansas Day Club and a speaker at last Friday night's Native Sons and Daughters banquet. But Gadberry had no announcement, and indications are he has decided not to make the race unless other candidacies do not materialize.

Parkville Man Victim of Fire

PARKVILLE, Mo. (AP) — A 78-year-old Parkville man was found dead Sunday morning, the victim of a fire that destroyed his home the night before.

The victim, identified by fire officials as Oran Brink was found after firemen spent the sub-zero night sifting through rubble at the home.

Parkville Fire Chief John Rapp said the blaze was caused by a faulty furnace. He said a repair man had visited Brink Saturday to work on the furnace.

Rapp said firemen were hampered in fighting the fire because of a lack of water hydrants in the lightly populated area where Brink lived.

Rapp said Brink's body was found in the basement of the home.

Irving Is Scheduled For Trial Appearance

NEW YORK (AP) — Author Clifford Irving was scheduled to face a Manhattan grand jury today as the mystery surrounding his alleged autobiography of Howard Hughes spawned new theories on the origin of the book and the disposal of royalty checks.

The grand jury is investigating what became of the $650,000 McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. gave Irving to transmit to Hughes as payment for the book. It was reported that Irving would ask for a delay in his grand jury appearance so he could brief his new attorney on the case.

The latest speculation restored some of the uncertainty dispelled when Irving, 41, admitted through his attorney last week that his wife Edith had deposited three checks totaling $650,000 in a Swiss bank account under the name "Helga R. Hughes."

Irving and his lawyer, Maurice Nessen, said Mrs. Irving later withdrew the money at the request of Hughes and redeposited the sum intact in a second Swiss bank.

But CBS and Time magazine reported Sunday that Mrs. Irving deposited only $450,000 in the second bank. The network said in its "60 Minutes" program that Irving spent $50,000 of the money, while

Time claimed the author was "frantically trying to raise $200,000."

Time also reported that the 999-page autobiography Irving says was compiled after more than 100 meetings with the reclusive billionaire may be partially based on a computer printout.

Time said it had learned of the existence of a computerized document that "contains virtually everything that has ever been published about Hughes, as well as thousands of memoranda dictated for and by Hughes—material enough for a dozen 'authentic' books."

"The likeliest scenario is that Irving somehow obtained some or all of the material in the printout," Time said. "It has been rumored, for example, that an angry former employee from the Hughes operation brought the material to Irving."

A man said to be Hughes has declared in affidavits and in a long distance telephone conversation with reporters that he had never met with Irving and denounced the autobiography as a hoax.

Richard Hannah, a Hughes public relations man, said Sunday that biographical data on Hughes had been computerized under the direction of Frank W. "Bill" Gray and with the assistance of Dr. John Pettit, a computer expert.

But Hannah insisted the "book" contained no secret or confidential memos and said there was not nearly a sufficient supply of material for all of Irving's text.

Newsweek magazine reported that Robert Maheu, a former close Hughes associate who is suing Hughes interests for $50 million, and John Meier, a onetime Hughes protegee, had access to the computer copy.

Maheu denied he had access to the material, but added he thought a leak was possible.

Meier called the Newsweek report "ridiculous," saying "I never met the man (Irving)."

Shoplifting Incidents Reported

Three incidents of shoplifting were reported to Sedalia police Saturday with one suspect appearing in police court Monday morning.

Miss Carol Johnson, Route 3, Versailles, was brought before the court on a charge of petit larceny by taking three record albums from the Gibson Store, 1020 Thompson Blvd., around 2:10 p.m. Saturday. Miss Johnson pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $50.

In the trial proceedings it was brought out that the girl had been arrested this past summer in Versailles on a similar charge, but charges there had been dismissed. It was also learned that Miss Johnson and a girl friend had driven to Sedalia without her mother's knowledge or permission.

In other incidents, L. G. Hardin, 1419 West Fourth, was arrested on a charge of petit larceny at 8 p.m. Saturday as he allegedly took a Sunbeam coffee pot valued at $20 from the Gibson Store without paying for it. The theft of the appliance occurred around 6 p.m. and a store employee got the license number of the car of the man believed to have taken it, according to police reports. That number was traced to Hardin who fit the description the employee gave police.

Three juveniles were accused of taking a 30 cent bag of candy from Consumer's Saturday evening. According to police reports the youths later came into the police station with a sales slip, but were released to juvenile authorities.

Farm Home Destroyed By Blaze

An old farm house about three miles northwest of Green Ridge was completely destroyed by fire Sunday night. Pettis County firemen arrived at the scene of the blaze hours after it had started and were unable to salvage any part of the structure.

Pettis County Fire Chief Robert Sisemore said the fire alarm on the blaze was sounded at 11:55 p.m. "When we got there all that was left were smoldering ruins, which were burned so badly we couldn't determine how many rooms there were in the house."

Cause of the fire is unknown. Sisemore said that his preliminary observations at the scene did not lead him to believe arson was involved.

"No one was around when we got there," Sisemore said. The residents of the home were tentatively identified as the A. Tisworth family. They could not be reached by fire officials for notification of the fire.

The location of the Tisworth family is being checked into by the Missouri Highway Patrol. During the time the county fire department was at the fire scene, a pick-up truck was found along side the ruins with a box of commodity food packed inside. There was also a large collection of fishing reels and power tools seen in a nearby barn.

County firemen were at the scene of the fire for about two hours. Most of that time, according to Sisemore, was spent walking around the site and sifting through the debris. The damage of the fire had been so extensive that it was not even necessary for the smoldering rubble to be watered down. Sisemore reported.

Green Returns To Hospital Bed

Pettis County Presiding Judge J. H. Green was admitted to Bothwell Hospital last week with congestion caused by flu. Mrs. Green told The Democrat-Capital Monday.

"His condition is not good," she added. Green's right leg was amputated on Nov. 12 due to diabetic complications.

Edde said 10 volunteers, five of them women, are helping in the food distribution, donating a total of 40 work hours each month.

Both local funding and volunteer work have been necessary because of reduced appropriations to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, organizer for national donated food programs.

Three Are Injured In Highway Mishap

FAIRFIELD — Three persons were injured in a head-on collision caused by icy roadways south of here on Highway 83 about 1 p.m. Sunday.

According to the highway patrol, a 1969 Cadillac driven by Bishop Eugene Frank, 63, Clayton, on his way to Sedalia to deliver an address, rounded a turn on Highway 83 and went out of control, crashing into a 1971 Ford driven south on 83 by Cletus Vernon Jones, 55, Cole Camp.

Jones suffered severe internal injuries and is in serious condition at the Bothwell Hospital Intensive Care Unit following surgery, hospital officials report.

Jones' son Thomas, 12, suffered a broken right arm in the collision.

Mrs. Eugene Frank, a passenger in the northbound Cadillac, suffered back injuries and is reported in fair condition at Bothwell.

Budget Is Subject Of Public Hearing

Pettis County's 1972 budget will be the subject of a public hearing scheduled for 9 a.m. Tuesday at the County Court, Mrs. Mary Jane Wilson, county clerk, told The Democrat-Capital.

County officials reported that the purpose of the hearing is to provide county residents the opportunity to discuss suggestions or objections to the budget's figures, which are scheduled to be released at the meeting.

None of the county officials would disclose the proposed budget figures. Judge E. L. "Red" Birdsong said the budget "is in good shape."

Diverticulosis Fairly Common

Dear Dr. Lamb—I have pockets in my intestines and cannot eat food that has skins or seeds. I have been told that there is a medicine you can take that will dissolve these pockets. Is that true?

Dear Reader—These occur where the muscular wall of the intestinal tube has given away or ruptured and allowed a portion of the lining (mucosa) of the intestines to protrude out in a little pocket or diverticula. The intestinal tube has several layers in its wall. The inner layer is the mucosa, or lining, that produces all types of secretions to aid in digestion and is the location for absorption of foodstuffs into the bloodstream.

There are muscular layers in the intestinal wall that are circular and some are lengthwise. Finally, the whole wall is bounded by tough, membranous material. The little pockets most often occur in people who have had an overactive digestive system. Often these are the people who have experienced constipation, diarrhea and other evidences of spasm and the build-up of pressure within the intestine.

Diverticulosis of the large intestine, or colon, is common, occurring in one out of five of the American population older than 40. Most people don't even know they have these and they are observed by X-ray examination or autopsy examination. Only about one out of five of the individuals with these have any symptoms, and only about one out of 100 who have these develop an inflammation of one of the little pockets which we call diverticulitis.

When this does occur, the inflamed pocket behaves very much like the inflamed pocket we call the appendix. The location for the pain and symptoms, however, may be different, since the pocket extending from the colon may vary in its location.

The treatment for diverticulosis is essentially the same as for constipation or irritable colon. This includes good, regular bowel habits promoted by forming a regular habit, usually in the morning, and aided by drinking two or three cups of warm water or liquid each morning. Chemical laxatives or any medicine that stimulates the bowel to forceful contractions is bad.

Some individuals will find certain foods aggravate the condition. Usually a diet that contains a lot of fruit and vegetables is prescribed to provide additional bulk for the stool and help to develop good bowel habits. However, there are some foods in this category that individual patients will not tolerate. Individuals with this problem should avoid the rich, starchy foods. This includes cake, pastries and rich desserts. Sweet drinks, such as sweetened coffee and alcohol, should be avoided. During episodes of pain, a heating pad over the abdomen will sometimes provide some relief.

Fire officials said the blaze started in a flower shop. The Flower Hutch, then spread to the C and M Cafe.

Three businesses. The Tool Warehouse, Jack's Seafood Garden and Joseph Ryckert Grocery, received smoke damage.

Fire units from nearby Shawnee and Overland Park were called to the scene along with other fire equipment from Northeast Johnson County communities.

Officials said the building involved is about 70 years old.

Damages $50,000 In Lenexa Blaze

LENEXA, Kan. (AP)—Damage has been estimated at $50,000 in a Saturday night fire which destroyed two businesses in one of the oldest buildings in downtown Lenexa.

Fire officials said the blaze started in a flower shop. The Flower Hutch, then spread to the C and M Cafe.

Three businesses. The Tool Warehouse, Jack's Seafood Garden and Joseph Ryckert Grocery, received smoke damage.

Fire units from nearby Shawnee and Overland Park were called to the scene along with other fire equipment from Northeast Johnson County communities.

Three Injured In Plane Crash

GREAT BEND, Kan. (AP)—Three men were injured Sunday afternoon in a freak accident involving two private planes at the Great Bend Municipal Airport.

The Kansas Highway Patrol said one of the planes landed on top of the other. The patrol said a plane piloted by Robert J. Binder, 37, of Hays, saw a plane piloted by Milton D. Pinkston, 41, of Seward, land ahead of him and apparently come to a stop.

The Patrol said the Binder plane began to land just as the Pinkston plane started to take off again. The patrol said the Pinkston plane was about 15 feet off the ground when the Binder plane landed on top of it. Binder's aircraft flipped forward onto its top, while Pinkston's skidded down the runway, caught fire, and burned. Pinkston was admitted to the Central Kansas Medical Center with back injuries.

New Way Found To Stop Hair Loss, Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss... and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done." But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss... but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in your family," this is certainly no proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. No matter which one is causing your hair loss, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair... now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days, at their risk, if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail and without obligation. Adv.

FOOD & FIBER NEWS

University of Missouri Extension Centers
Henry Johnson-Lafayette-Pettis

A conference for soil and water conservation contractors — mainly those involved in earth moving work — is scheduled at the University of Missouri-Columbia Wednesday.

Various aspects of animal waste management, in light of the Missouri approach, will be discussed during the morning program.

They will discuss problems involved in layout and construction of animal waste management systems, management of such systems and how lagoons function and why they sometimes fail.

Also to be discussed will be underground outlets to drain excess water collected by terraces.

Ag Day

A space age atmosphere will prevail at the annual Ag Day program on the University of Missouri-Columbia campus Friday.

The event, sponsored by the Ag Alumni Association, will be highlighted by the guest appearance of Philip Chapman, the only scientist among U. S. astronauts.

Adding to the space age atmosphere will be a variety of exhibits including a sample of lunar rock and materials extracted from moon dust.

Chapman will be the keynote speaker following an Ag Day barbecue slated to begin at 11:30 a.m. in the Livestock Center.

The barbecue meal will feature prime beef loin selected and prepared by College of Agriculture meats specialists. Banquet tables will be served by faculty of the College. Department chairmen will be headwaiters.

Astronaut Chapman's speech will follow a ceremony during which a number of awards will be presented to outstanding Alumni and friends of the College.

Ag Day barbecue tickets are available at your University Extension Center.

Irrigation Show

The latest irrigation and land forming technical developments will be seen at an equipment show planned at the University of Missouri-Columbia Tuesday.

A highlight of the equipment show will be a display showing an automated laser surveying system for land grading. Also of special interest will be displays of electric drive center pivot sprinkler systems, traveling gun sprinklers, and gated pipe. These systems are being used for livestock waste disposal as well as irrigation.

Conference speakers will discuss irrigating high value crops and forages, using groundwater resources, benefits from land forming, and irrigation research and field results.

A related activity will be a banquet meeting of the Missouri Irrigation and Land Forming Assn. It is planned for 6 p.m. Monday, at the Columbia Best Western Inn. Interested persons are welcome.

Electrification Conference

A program of interest to farmers and electric power supplier representatives has been planned for a farm electrification conference at the University of Missouri-Columbia Tuesday and Wednesday.

Opening day speakers will discuss small electric mills, livestock ventilation systems, effect of evaporative cooling on beef production, and insulation selection and installation.

Also to be discussed will be topics concerning new developments in such electrical applications as grain roasting, electric brooding, an electric riding lawn mower, and low temperature grain drying.

In addition to topics on water use and quality, there will be opportunity to hear the latest information on several types of animal waste disposal systems. Discussions will relate to state and national environmental concerns.

Another subject of high interest to farmers will be the status of enforcement of the Occupational Safety and Health Act as it applies to their operations.

An electric equipment display will be open to visitors throughout the day. To be seen will be automatic mills, electronic brooding controls, a riding lawn mower, grain drying equipment, newly designed water softener, and various feed and materials handling equipment.

The conference is one of several events scheduled during the UMC College of Agriculture's Ag Science Week, Tuesday through Friday.

Feeding Seminar

A cattle feeding seminar is scheduled at Columbia Thursday and Friday. Highlights of the two-day event will be discussions of open lot and confinement feeding systems, preconditioning, and backgrounding.

Cattlemen and feeders will relate experiences and give management tips. UMC researchers and livestock specialists will discuss research findings and summarize farm record data.

The program will get underway at 10:15 a.m. with presentations on open and confinement feeding facilities, their costs, and differences to be expected in feed efficiency and gain.

Pollution controls for open and confinement lots and their costs will be another program topic. State regulations bearing on the subject will be discussed. A cattle feeder who has had experience with both kinds of lots will relate his views.

A panel will discuss preconditioning from cattlemen and feeder points of view. Experiences with backgrounding cattle will be related by Curtis Taber, Brixey rancher who handles 2,000 head a year. An analysis of Kansas farm records on backgrounding will also be presented. A question period of backgrounding is planned.

The effects on pasture gains of implanting yearling steers with Ralgro and stilbestrol will be discussed. Data to be presented were obtained from a field study of 27 Missouri herds.

A beef cattle outlook, presented at 10:30 a.m. Friday will conclude the seminar. A 7 p.m. banquet is planned Thursday at the Memorial Union. Guest speaker will be Kenneth Monfort, well known Greeley, Colorado cattle feeder and beef packer.

Outlook

Income prospects for those farmers who can obtain control over an economic sized unit and have reasonable managerial ability appears good in the year ahead and for the next several years. Those who operate less than economic-sized units may have to supplement their income with off-farm work. They may reap satisfactions from life and the opportunity to live where they like and to farm as they like. Not everyone in agriculture has the ability or the desire to take on the responsibility required today to operate a modern economic-sized farm unit.

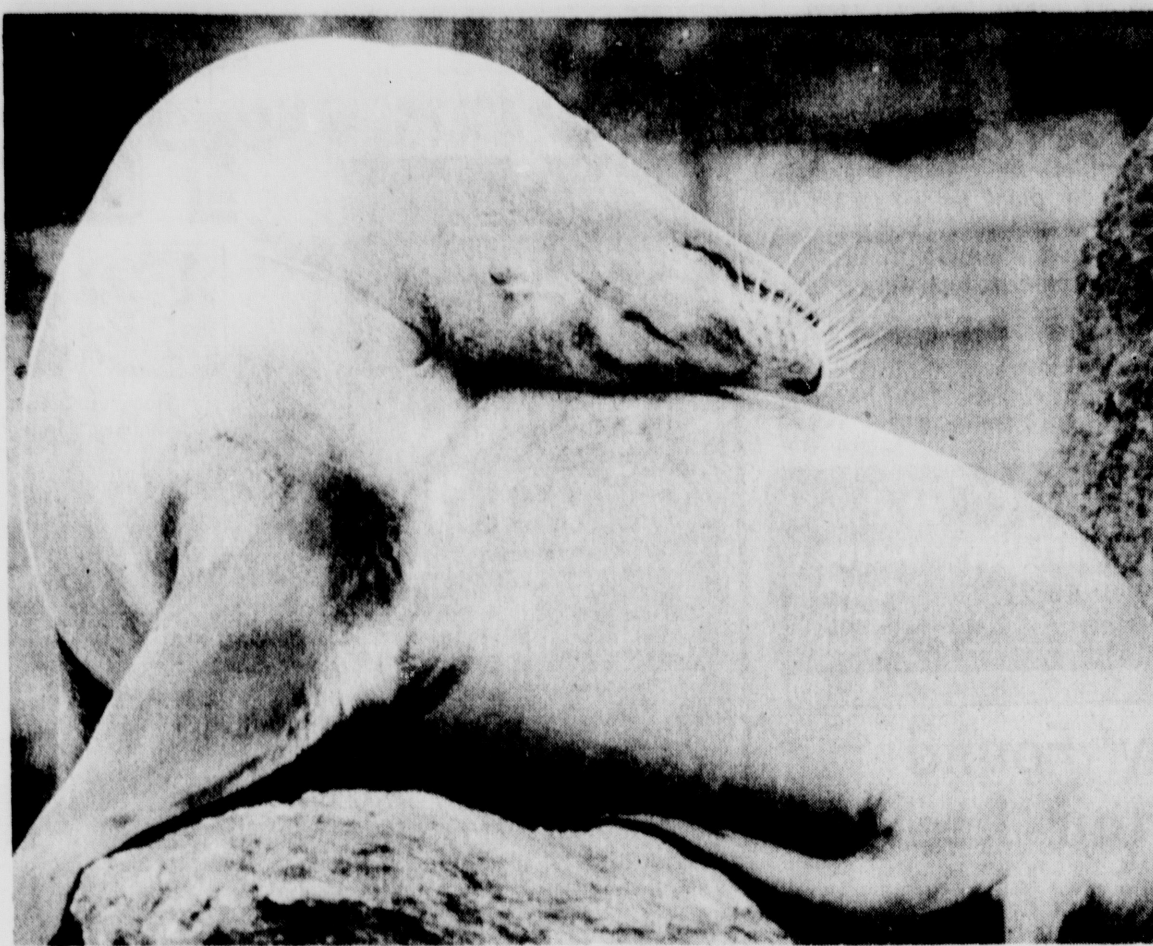

Glenn Grimes Says

Hog prices in January have been considerably stronger than indicated earlier. These strong prices are a result of a sharp 15 per cent reduction in slaughter the first two weeks of January as compared to last year. We do not believe that these reduced marketings necessarily indicate that inventories of hogs on Dec. 1 are incorrect. Slaughter of hogs under Federal Inspection during December was down less than two per cent as compared to last year. The last two weeks of December were actually larger than a year earlier, probably because some hog producers marketed hogs early to get the income into 1971. This probably is one of the major reasons slaughter was down in early January. Unless the inventories of hogs and pigs on farms Dec. 1 as reported by USDA was considerably too high, we probably will have our peak in hog prices for this winter in January.

These higher prices than expected may provide the incentive to start increasing numbers by the third quarter of this year, which would mean larger marketing a year from now and a relatively quick turnaround in the hog cycle.

We believe fed cattle marketings will be larger the first quarter of 1972 than last year, probably by the seven per cent indicated in the Jan. 1 report. There is a possibility that these larger marketings could be bunched, which would increase the downward pressure on prices. However, we think cow slaughter and non-fed steer and heifer slaughter will be less than last year during the next two months. Our present estimate is for non-fed cattle slaughter to be down enough to hold total commercial slaughter to an increase of 3 to 4 per cent.

Choice 900-1,100 pound steers averaged about $34.70 per cwt. at St. Joseph the first two weeks in January. If marketings develop as indicated by the Jan. 1 report, fed cattle prices will be under pressure by February. Prices of choice steers in

Flower Varieties Recommended

With the January arrival of seed and nursery catalogs, most of us have already had a chance to see pictures of some of the new flowers.

Plan to add a few of these new varieties to your garden this year. But, keep some of your old favorites. It takes a good combination of old and new to make an interesting and beautiful garden.

No discussion of new flowers is complete without listing the 1972 All-American selections of flowering annuals and perennials. Winners are selected from tests in 28 trial grounds located throughout the U.S.

Award winners this year are a zinnia, Carved Ivory; a petunia, Circus; a marigold, Gold Galore; and a hollyhock, Summer Carnival.

The Carved Ivory is a cactus-flowered type with creamy-white flowers. It develops a bushy plant about 2½ feet tall. Circus is a free-blooming, bushy petunia of the double grandiflora class. Its large flowers are salmon-pink and white in a variegated pattern.

Gold Galore grows to about two feet tall and is classed as a hedge-type marigold. Its large flowers are freely produced from early summer to frost. Growth habit is similar to the Jubilee varieties introduced several years ago.

Carnival grows up to about five feet. It is available in many colors. It will flower the first year from seed. From then on it becomes a perennial. Some All-America selections are made by other groups. All-America rose selections are made under the direction of the American Rose Society. Their testing method is much like that for the annual flowers. This year two rose varieties received awards. They are Apollo and Portrait.

Apollo is a yellow hybrid tea rose with long pointed buds. It is said to have good disease resistance. The flowers are fragrant.

Portrait is the first rose ever bred by an amateur to win the award. It is a blend of cream shading through yellow to a satiny blush pink. It also is reported to have good disease resistance.

Gladiolus varieties also receive All-America awards. This year's winners are Cameo and Miss America.

Along with the All-America winners many excellent varieties are introduced each year. One of the new petunias, Polynesia, has bright coral-salmon flowers. It blooms quite heavily. Large flowers are produced on compact plants.

An outstanding new ageratum is Royal Blazer. The very dwarf plants are quite uniform and produce rich purple flowers from midsummer to frost.

An orchid color has been added to dwarf impatiens (Sultana) this year. The variety if Elfin Orchid. Plants grow only eight to 10 inches tall. It is a pleasant, cool color for the shady spot in the garden.

A new portulaca, Sunkist, is for the sunny spot. Double flowers are produced in many colors. The vigorous plants spread as much as two feet across.

A new summer forget-me-not (Anchusa) called Blue Angel produces mounds of small blue flowers. Plants grow only eight to 10 inches tall.

Damages Result In Disturbances

February and March should hold above the $30-$32 level at St. Joseph even with a seven per cent increase in fed marketings. However, there is always the possibility that prices will over-react downward and go lower than indicated by the supply-demand situation. A part of this kind of situation is brought about by lagging retail prices which widens and narrows marketing margin and shows down the reflection to consumers of increased or decreased supplies. We know of no accurate way to predict the level of marketing margin for a short period. The data does suggest that retailers are slower to reduce prices than to increase them.

Another factor that could contribute to lower prices is for feeders to hold cattle to heavier weights. In the past when prices declined substantially, feeders have banded to hold cattle a few more days hoping for a price recovery.

Average slaughter weights through December and at the present time are slightly below a year ago. We expect average weights to increase relative to last year this winter and spring. Feeder cattle prices through the last four months of 1971 were a record high. We doubt that prices will get any higher in late winter and spring than they are at the present time. The demand for light feeders to go on pasture probably will about offset weakness due to some lower fed cattle prices. If fed cattle prices do decline some as expected, heavy weight feeder cattle prices will also weaken.

Farm Roundup

Unimproved Acreage Study Is Completed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has completed a study showing that 49 million acres now in woods and pastures could be shifted into crop production on a profitable basis.

Meanwhile, the department is asking farmers this year to take more than 60 million acres of land from the production of feed grain, wheat and cotton in an attempt to curb rising surpluses and bolster sagging prices paid to farmers.

The study, by the Economic Research Service, says the land suited for conversion to crops extends along the lower Mississippi Valley and through the Southeast. Much of it could be used for soybeans and rice, the report said.

About 37 million acres present are in woodland and 12 million in pastures, the ERS said. The conversion could be accomplished "profitably" under recent price and cost relationships.

That means, the ERS said, that crops grown on the cleared land would earn enough to pay a return on the investment for clearing, in addition to estimated costs of crop production.

"If there were a further need for it, a total of 98.7 million acres in these regions could be converted," the ERS said.

But the report warned that clearing more land for crops could spell trouble.

"The market could be disrupted unless offsetting shifts occurred in demand or in production of these crops mainly rice and soybeans in other areas," the report said.

The department is not expected to make a move to encourage farmers in what ERS says could be profitable venture for adding millions of acres to the nation's crop land.

Current plans call for farmers to reduce feed grain plantings alone in 1972 by 38 million acres, more than double the land held idle last year. Another 22 million or more is wanted out of wheat production, and cotton growers probably will have two million or more "set aside" this year.

The ERS study, while not specifically saying so, does raise questions over worries that the nation may be in danger soon of running out of farm land because of urban sprawl, highway construction and other nonfarm encroachments.

WASHINGTON (AP) — American consumers who favor imported meat may not like it, but hog farmers might benefit from reports that Danish and Dutch canned hams will soon be costing more in American supermarkets.

The Agriculture Department said today that suppliers of canned hams and pork shoulders are reported by "trade sources" on the verge of raising prices of those products shipped to the United States by five cents a pound or more.

"This action would reflect the recent devaluation of the dollar in relation to Dutch and Danish currency," the Foreign Agricultural Service said in a report.

However, no price increases have yet been reported for canned pork from Yugoslavia, Hungary or Poland, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — While farm income did not fatten any last year, neither did the nation's wineries, according to an Agriculture Department report.

The USDA is required by law to regulate fat content of hot dogs and other cooked sausages at 30 per cent or less. Last year, according to laboratory tests, 97.9 per cent of the nation's hotdogs were in compliance with the 30-per-cent rule, compared with 97.4 in 1970.

Average fat content last year was 27.9 per cent, a little leaner than the 28.0 per cent reported for 1970.

Net farm income, still not pegged officially by the department, was not expected to fatten last year from the $15.7 billion in 1970.

Missile Patrol Boats Are Received By Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviets have started sending Cuba bigger, more heavily armed missile-firing patrol boats, Pentagon sources report. The first two OSA-class boats reached Havana in mid-January.

They arrived nearly a month after Cuban gunboat attacks on two unarmed Panamanian-registered freighters in the Caribbean brought U.S. warnings of possible air and naval counteraction.

The 35-knot OSAs mount four Styx missiles with high-explosive warheads and a range of about 15 miles.

The U.S. Navy has been concerned about the Styx since the Egyptians sank an Israeli destroyer with one of them in 1967.

More recently, the Indian navy reportedly sank a Pakistani destroyer with a Soviet-supplied Styx.

The new 200-ton OSA craft have a greater operating range and carry twice as many missiles launched as the 18 older Komar-class patrol boats furnished to Cuba by the Russians in the 1960s.

Last October, Russia made deliveries of MIG21 jet fighters to Cuba for the first time in more than four years. The provision of newer and more-powerful missile boats is viewed by some Pentagon officials as another indication that the Soviet Union is embarked on a program of strengthening Cuba's armed forces.

Intelligence officials told a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee last September that most of Cuba's weapons predate the 1962 missile crisis, and that Soviet shipments in recent years have consisted largely of spare parts and replacements.

Meanwhile, a Russian guided-missile frigate and a diesel-powered submarine left Cuba last week after nearly three months during which they engaged in antisubmarine exercises with the Cubans.

This was the longest such visit by Soviet fighting ships since the Russian navy began sending fleet units to Cuba in July 1969.

U.S. reconnaissance has kept constant watch on the port of Cienfuegos, on Cuba's south coast, where the Russians have moored barges and built barracks and other facilities that could be used to support submarine operations.

The Russians have been reported conducting research in the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico on such phenomena as sea currents, water temperatures and composition. Experts say this kind of information would be important to the Soviets for a submarine operations there.

Clothing Construction Course Is Offered

Two beginning courses in Clothing Construction will be offered by the University of Missouri Extension Division for seven weekly sessions beginning Feb. 7.

The course, which is designed for the homemaker who is interested in learning to construct simple garments for herself and her family, will be taught by Mrs. Chester Wissman.

The evening course will be held Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m. at State Fair Community College, and the afternoon course will be offered Wednesdays from 1 to 3 p.m.

Most of the teaching will be done by demonstration, an extension division spokesman said, and a sewing machine in the home will be an asset, she added.

The course will cover an introduction to sewing, pattern fitting, darts, zippers, facings, collars, sleeves, buttonholes, and covered belts.

For information about registration contact the University of Missouri Extension Center, 827-0591.

Cooking Tips for Corn-on-the Cob

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

Supposedly someone last season counted the Florida sweet corn crop and determined that growers sent more than 550 million ears of corn to dinner tables across the United States. This was during the months of November through May. Without the staggering statistics it's nice to know that fresh corn is available to almost all areas year-round. Fresh corn is shipped under layers of shaved ice to help preserve its flavor. Once purchased, cook immediately or keep in the refrigerator and cook as soon as possible. Fresh boiled corn is at its best when dropped into boiling water and cooked only 5 to 6 minutes. Bake or roast fresh corn from 20 to 25 minutes.

To cook fresh corn-on-the-cob remove husks from ears of fresh corn and brush off silks. Drop in a kettle of boiling water to cover. Add 1 teaspoon salt and cook, covered, 5 minutes. Remove from water and serve with seasoned spreads. Allow 1 to 2 ears per person.

To roast corn in-the-husk loosen husks on ears of fresh corn; remove silks. Pull husks back over ears and tie in place with string or strips of the husk. Soak in cold water for 10 minutes. Arrange corn in a baking pan. Place in a preheated 350-degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Remove husks and serve ears with butter or margarine. Allow 1 to 2 ears per person.

To bake in foil remove husks and silks from fresh corn. Place each ear on a square of aluminum foil. Sprinkle with salt, ground black pepper and top with a thin slice of butter or margarine. Wrap securely by making a double lengthwise fold on top of the ear. Turn the ends up and fold smooth against the corn. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven 20 to 25 minutes. To serve, open the fold and turn foil back, crimping to look attractive.

BARBECUE PARMESAN SPREAD

To 1/2-cup butter or margarine, softened, add one-third cup grated Parmesan cheese and 2 1/2 teaspoons barbecue spice. Stir until thoroughly blended. Makes 1/2-cup.

CHIVE SPREAD

To 1/2-cup butter or margarine, softened, add 2 tablespoons freeze-dried chives, 1/2-teaspoon lemon juice, 1/2-teaspoon salt and 1-teaspoon ground black pepper. Mix well. Makes 1/2-cup.

Year-round Treat

Whether dropped in boiling water, year and is easy to prepare. Serve with roasted in the husk or baked in foil, Barbeque Parmesan Spread or Chive corn-on-the-cob can be enjoyed all Spread. (NEA)

Have New Attitude On Women's Clothing

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A taxi driver got his gears mixed and his eyeballs crossed recently on Mexico City's biggest boulevard, jumped a curb and hit a light post.

The cause? Extra tight hot-pants on a statuesque senorita.

It is now quite common to see hot pants in this capital city of almost eight million persons. But it's new—a year or two ago women were still cautioned not to even wear slacks on Mexican streets.

Now pants suits, slacks and microminis have joined hot pants in vogue with sophisticated young señoritas influenced by styles from north of the border. No longer are female tourists turned away from plush Mexico City restaurants simply because they wore a pants suit.

"If a woman is dressed in good taste and is accompanied by an escort she can go anywhere in our hotel," said a manager of one of Mexico City's newest, and swiftest, hostels. "But ordinary street shorts—no."

"The only type of dress we don't allow in our cabaret at night is hot pants," another hotel manager said. "But of course it sometimes depends on who the person is."

Many conventions or meetings use young ladies in hot pants or miniskirts as guides or aides—a 180-degree change of course in a country that passed the '60s extremely conservative in women's styles.

Catholic churches often still stop young visitors in shorts or miniskirts, but almost every place else is open.

Acapulco on the Pacific Coast has been more liberal in what a woman can wear. However, bathing suits are taboo in good restaurants and a woman in a bikini at the market place still draws frowns.

Of course when one gets away from the larger cities on the tourist circuit those wearing slacks, shorts or miniskirts are still stared at, sometimes with open hostility.

New editions of tourist guides advise comfortable and leisure-type clothing whereas earlier editions cautioned against slacks and shorts.

"We're selling hot pants over miniskirts five to one," said the manager of a fashionable women's boutique in the Zona Rosa, a cosmopolitan section of this capital city.

"And the girls have no trouble going anywhere they want to."

A local television station sponsors a weekly dance contest between young girls dressed in miniskirts and others in hot pants. It is an apparent success among its young audience.

And what does that taxi driver think of the change in styles?

"I love it," he grinned as the cops led him away.

Tarpaulin Sled Aids When Cleaning Yard

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — To keep my three lots tidy there are lots of leaves, grass and garden trash that I must get rid of and I have tried using a cart, a wagon and a wheelbarrow. About two years ago, I bought a 5-by-7-foot tarpaulin for about $3 and ran plastic clothesline through the eyelets that were in it. Now the trash is put on the tarpaulin and pulled like a sled to my compost pile or wherever I want to dump it, then I go back for another load. This can be folded and stored anywhere in little space and is certainly easier on my 63-year-old back than anything else I have tried. — IDA

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I inherited about 100 pieces of costume jewelry from an old aunt who died at the age of 91. There are earrings, necklaces, buckles, pins and so on. My problem is how to clean it up, particularly the gold and silver necklaces and the pearls. Is there a product on the market for cleaning jewelry or would soda or ammonia work? Please help me. — CAROLINE

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with those people with very dirty hands who wash their hands and leave dirty soap for the next person. It is very simple to teach children to rinse off the soap and I find they are often the worst offenders. — MISS A. S. R.

DEAR POLLY — The odor of cat urine can be removed from Mrs. J. T.'s carpet by applying a solution of half white vinegar and half warm water. Let stand for about five minutes, then blot up with a terry cloth towel or paper toweling. Test an inconspicuous spot first. — MRS. R. F.

DEAR POLLY — Mrs. J. T. who has the kitty odor in her rug should thoroughly wash the rug with foam rug shampoo, maybe five or 10 times, or, better still, send it to a professional cleaner. If odor persists after using vinegar, ammonia, deodorizers, etc., she might find, as we did, that 1/4-pound of fresh coffee grounds put under the rug will clear the odor promptly. It is really, amazing. Wall-to-wall carpeting would present a problem for such a treatment but it is easy with loose rugs. — MRS. C. E. H.

Bids For Amnesty With a Difference

It has been remarked that the ancestors of innumerable Americans were draft or war resisters or political or religious dissidents who fled to this country to escape military service or life under oppressive governments.

The idea is that our present-day draft evaders or Army deserters, some 70,000 of whom are said to be in Canada alone, are following in an honored American tradition and that the stigma is not on them but on the nation which was and is prosecuting an "immoral" war in Vietnam.

The comparison might be valid except for one thing: Those who came to America in search of freedom came for keeps, renouncing and abjuring all allegiance to their native lands forever.

They did not, from the sanctuary of America, demand that the king or the kaiser or the czar grant them amnesty or meet certain conditions as the price of their return. They had no thought or desire to return to their former countries. Neither did those countries desire to have them back.

The Vietnam war dissenters protest a little too much. If "Amerika" was so far sunk into imperialism and fascism as to be unliveable for them, if they felt they could not in conscience serve its government, why do we hear these self-righteous proclamations from Toronto and Stockholm rejecting anything short of absolute and total amnesty before they will consent to come home?

Why do they want to come back to this terrible country at all?

Let them stew. Let them stew until they accept the fact that they will have to meet the American people at least part way, and that when they come back, if they do come back, it will have to be as something less than full-fledged heroes.

No One Has 'Lost'—or Gained—India's Loyalty

NEW DELHI — Has the United States "lost" India? That is the kind of question which sends sensitive Indians into livid protest that the U.S. could not possibly lose what she never had in her pocket.

Nevertheless, as the Nixon administration undertakes a reassessment of its policies toward this subcontinent, Washington is asking the key question of whether Soviet influence has grown so great in India that the United States should throw in the towel.

The U.S. "country plan" for India has long set as a primary goal: "To prevent South Asia from becoming a major focus of a great power conflict or from coming under the domination of any external power."

When Ambassador Kenneth B. Keating was called home from Delhi, the embassy here was asked for an assessment of just how far into the Soviet camp India has drifted and just how far she may continue to drift either out of gratitude for Russian support in the recent war with Pakistan or out of anger over U.S. opposition.

Following is a summary of what most observers here consider a realistic assessment.

India has developed close ties with the Soviet Union, and the Russians are working hard, though delicately, to capitalize on the current strained relations with the United States.

The Soviets will have some success because Russia and India have one overpowering thing in common: a fear of mainland China. India needs the military assistance, the implied protection, the Soviet Union can give. The Soviets see India as an essential barrier to expanded Chinese influence in South Asia and Burma.

Although the British fighter-interceptor, the "Gnat" and the T-10 anti-tank missile from France played devastating roles against Pakistan, the Russian T-55 and PT-76 tanks were the backbone of India's war push. The eight OSA missile boats from Russia did perhaps 90 per cent of the damage at Karachi.

India is buying arms from France, Britain, Sweden and even yet seeks military communications equipment from the United States, but she has become most dependent on the Soviet Union, which provides over half her armor and all her heavy and medium artillery. There is absolutely no chance of this changing, because Western countries — especially the U.S.A. — have cut off arms to India so many times in previous conflicts with Pakistan that India says they are unreliable and thus jeopardize her security.

Indians value Russian political support as much as the military support.

"How do you put a dollar value on three U.N. Security Council vetoes?" the governor of West Bengal asked me by way of making the point that Indian gratitude for those Soviet "nyets" might exceed the gratitude for billions of dollars of U.S. aid.

The expectation, then, is that India is going to vote with, cooperate with, Russia in almost every instance where there is no conflict with India's vital interests. Where there is a conflict, Mrs. Indira Gandhi probably will prove that Henry Kissinger was right when he said, "The lady is cold-blooded." She will resist Soviet pressures and look out for India.

What prospect is there, then, that India will reward Russia by giving her the warm water ports the Soviets are believed to want badly? I put the question bluntly to T. N. Kaul, India's foreign secretary.

"This propaganda has been going on in some countries for a long time despite the categorical denials that we've issued repeatedly," he said. "We are against giving any military bases, land, naval or air, to any country anywhere on our soil, in our ports or our territorial waters."

Americans here believe this. But they are not so sure that struggling Bangladesh, groping for the support essential to survival, might not give the Russians a base at Chittagong while the Indians wring their hands in mock protest.

But if anything is obvious in victorious India today it is burgeoning pride, an intense increase in nationalism. A top official in the defense ministry said to me: "When we were weak, any American who thought Russia could put us in her pocket, or any Russian who thought the reverse, was a fool. He will be more foolish to think that today than yesterday."

Kaul put it this way: "India is going her own way. She will not be dominated or dictated to by any other power — The United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain or France. India's size, population, resources, tradition, history and culture make one thing certain: India will always be India."

American diplomats are putting it more succinctly in their advice to the White House. "India is indigestible," they say.

This would suggest an end to petulant Washington talk of throwing in the towel, or of having won or lost India.

The wise U.S. course is to abandon a foolish policy and watch without panic whatever the future and Indian nationalism combine to produce.

A Conservative View

The Case For Nixon In 1972

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Conservatives are sorely torn these days on the question of supporting Richard Nixon for re-election. We seem to be divided between the disenchanted on the one hand and the absolutely disenchanted on the other. There is not much enthusiasm in us.

Both factions tend to agree generally on a bill of particular grievances. The President is given high marks for his unwinding of the war in Vietnam. He is roundly criticized for welfare reform, price and wage controls, and deficit finance.

The principal disagreement between the disenchanted and the absolutely disenchanted has to do with political tactics. Those in the former group argue that bad as Nixon may be, a Democrat in the White House would be worse. Those in the latter group contend that nothing could be worse: they would let the presidency go by default in November, and spend four years building up a reliable conservative for nomination in 1976.

Now, I happen to believe that my absolutely disenchanted brothers are wrong. If I were making a case in court, I would call up as Exhibit A the defense budget unveiled by George McGovern on January 19, and as Exhibit B the defense budget unveiled by the President on January 24.

Senator McGovern, to be sure, is not likely to win the Democratic nomination. Yet his attitude toward national security is not significantly different from the attitude of, say, Muskie, Kennedy, Humphrey and Lindsay. Doubtless the other candidates would disagree on some of McGovern's specific recommendations, but their underlying position is generally the same: They want to cut defense spending, and they want to cut it hard.

McGovern's proposed defense budget, spelled out in a 25,000-word position paper, rests on the assumption that both the Soviet Union and Communist China will remain hostile to the United States, but that neither poses a serious threat of actual war. To increase our spending on arms, in the McGovern view, would be doubly in error: It would waste public funds better spent on human needs, and it would heighten international tensions.

From these premises, McGovern argues for dramatic cutbacks all along the line. For starters, he would bring home all troops from Southeast Asia and from Korea. He would bring home more than half of those now assigned to NATO in Europe. He would reduce the number of men on active duty from 2.5 million to 1.7 million; in the process, he would cut the army to 10 divisions and the Marines to only two.

McGovern proposes a Navy of 341 ships, roughly half the present fleet. He would halt the conversion of Polaris submarines to the larger Poseidon missiles. He would get along with six aircraft carriers. He would permit construction of three new submarines a year for the next five years; otherwise "no further construction is required."

In other areas, the Democratic candidate would halt the construction of further atomic weapons, abandon the Titan intercontinental ballistic missile, reduce the army's surface-to-air missile capability, cut the Air Force's interceptor force by more than half, discontinue the upgrading of Minuteman missiles, halt the deployment of the Safeguard system, stop development of the B-1 bomber, suspend further work on the F-15 fighter — and so on, and so on.

By contrast, Nixon recommends a moderate strengthening of U.S. defenses. He seeks authorization for an $83.5 billion budget. McGovern's idea is $54.8 billion. Nixon would make three times the investment in research that McGovern would make. On virtually every point, the difference between the Republican Nixon and the Democrat McGovern is strikingly clear.

Question for my absolutely disenchanted colleagues: Would you truly want to risk a McGovern attitude in the White House for the next four years? Granted that Nixon's administration has been, in some respects, a disappointment. Would you truly risk disaster in its place?

Merry-Go-Round

Chiang Is Embittered By Nixon's Policies

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's turnabout on Communist China has left Chiang Kai-shek isolated, lonely and personally embittered on his island retreat.

The 85-year-old Generalissimo, according to intimates just back from Taiwan, feels that he has been double-crossed by an old friend.

Over the years, Chiang has wined, dined, and financed Richard Nixon. In 1950, Chiang sent his nephew, Louis Kung, to California with a bankroll of $100 bills to contribute to Nixon's campaign for the Senate.

The Chiang regime's financial house, the National Bank of China, also retained a public relations outfit called Allied Syndicates to help elect Nixon. The firm hired Leo Casey, who organized the "Independent Voters Committee for Nixon."

In 1964, Nixon visited Taiwan in behalf of his chief law client, Pepsi Cola. He was lavished with hospitality by the Chiangs. Not long afterward, the Generalissimo opened up Taiwan to Pepsi Cola.

The Chiangs have also showered Nixon with valuable gifts, including several Chinese paintings which used to hang in the hallway of Nixon's fashionable Fifth Avenue apartment in New York City. These were a personal gift from Madame Chiang.

Old Chiang had every reason to believe that Nixon, in the White House, would continue to be a close friend and dependable ally. They exchanged warm, personal letters. The old Washington-Taipei axis seemed stronger than ever.

The first test came in the Spring of 1969. The State Department wanted to recognize Mongolia, the bleak, wind-swept desert country, which forms a buffer between China and Russia. Recognition would have given the United States a closer view of the epic Russian-Chinese struggle in this remote but strategic area.

But Chiang Kai-shek growled an angry objection from his island lair. He didn't want to see the United States establish a diplomatic outpost in what used to be part of the Chinese mainland. He still had enough influence at the White House to get the State Department overridden.

Unknown to the old tyrant, however, Nixon was changing his thinking about Communist China. Just 15 days after he took office as President, he ordered a major review of U.S.-China relations.

A year later, the National Security Council delivered three thick volumes upon his desk. These confirmed his growing belief that the United States should play China and Russia off against one another.

As early as November 1969, Nixon quietly terminated the two-deskroy patrol that the United States had kept in the Taiwan Strait. This was intended as a signal to Peking that Washington wanted to improve relations.

The President's ultimate announcement that he would visit Peking came as a jolt to Chiang. The Generalissimo, say intimates, was shocked at the news and bitter over Nixon's failure to consult him.

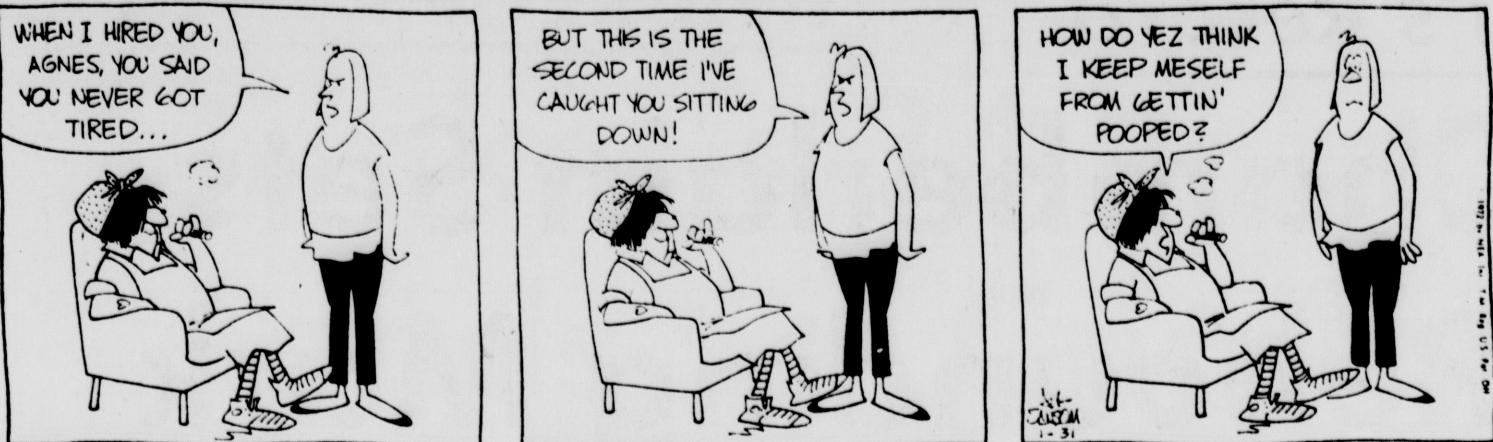

Nixon tried to appease his old friend by writing a warm letter, assuring him that the U.S. would faithfully keep its defense commitments to Taiwan. But the aging Chinese leader retreated into deep isolation and avoided American friends who tried to see him.

The U.S. embassy worked through other Nationalist leaders to soften the blow. It would help, they agreed, if President Nixon would include Chiang on his schedule of summit meetings. But the President feared this would offend the Red Chinese on the eve of his Peking visit and delicately rejected the suggestion.

Desperately, the U.S. embassy urged a meeting, at least, between Secretary of State Bill Rogers and Foreign Minister Chow Shu-kai.

Oswald: "Losing bridge players like to complain about their bad luck. Luck does play a major part in your results in any one session. However, in the long run, luck tends to even out and it is the skill factor that determines the winners and losers."

Jim: "One class of players who suffer from this 'hard luck' is the one who rushes to bid no-trump when his holding calls for some other bid. Here is a good example."

Oswald: "With 14 high-card points the South hand meets one requirement for a two no-trump response. Unfortunately for the man who bid two no-trump, it fails miserably in a most important requirement — preparation for the opening lead."

Jim: "South found that out quickly. West opened the queen of hearts. South covered with dummy's king. East plunked on the ace and the defense had five tricks before South could gain the lead."

Oswald: "I can imagine South's wails of anguish. He must have pointed out that if West held the ace of hearts or if any other suit had been led, he would have scored game and rubber."

Jim: "He sure did. What he didn't point out was that if he had responded two clubs then North would bid two no-trump and it wouldn't matter where the ace of hearts was or what was led."

Tops Russell's Record

Wilt Chamberlain Sets NBA Rebounding Mark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wilt Chamberlain is still getting revenge on Bill Russell.

When Chamberlain broke into the National Basketball Association in 1959, he was recognized as the greatest scorer the league had ever seen but was regularly slighted in comparison with Russell, the bellwether of Boston's NBA dynasty.

Russell was hailed as the master shot-blocker, rebounder, and team leader, while Wilt pointed to his superior statistics in vain.

Sunday night Chamberlain, now an elder statesman in the NBA at 33, broke Russell's career rebounding record of 12,721 while the Los Angeles Lakers were pounding the Portland Trail Blazers 153-131.

Elsewhere, Milwaukee edged Baltimore 116-112, Boston whipped Philadelphia 130-114, Chicago downed Detroit 109-99, Phoenix shaded Atlanta 105-103 and Buffalo nipped Cleveland 99-98.

It didn't end the controversy over who was the better player but Chamberlain said it was a mark he would cherish.

"I'm proud because it shows consistency and durability," said the Lakers' 7-foot-1 center and captain. "It means as much to me as my scoring records."

He broke the record in his 932nd game—it took Russell 963—and went on to collect 24 rebounds, 27 points and praise from both coaches.

"Wilt was awesome," said the Trail Blazers' Roland Todd. "When he plays like this nobody can beat the Lakers."

"I just don't think any center in pro basketball can play better than Wilt is right now," said Lakers Coach Bill Sharman, a Celtic teammate of Russell.

They gave Chamberlain an inscribed backboard and hoop to add to his trophy case, along with mementos of a 50.4 scoring average in 1961-62, a 48.3 career minutes-played average.

counting overtime, for the same season, and the honors he will receive soon for becoming the first NBA player to score 30,000 points.

The Lakers reached another record Sunday by breaking the team mark for field goals with 67. Gail Goodrich and Jerry West led with 29 and 28 points, and West added 14 assists. Reserves Stan McKenzie and Larry Steele led the Blazers with 22 and 21 points.

Milwaukee wiped out a 13-point halftime deficit and turned back Baltimore on Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's uncontested layup in the final minute following a court-length pass from Toby Kimball. Jon McGlocklin's two free throws in the final second sewed it up. Jabbar paced the Bucks with 39 points while Archie Clark had 24 for Baltimore.

Dave Cowens and John Havlicek combined for 25 of Boston's 41 points in the third period as the Celtics broke open a tight game and routed Philadelphia. Havlicek and Cowens led the Celts with 33 and 27 points, respectively, while Philadelphia's Billy Cunningham took game honors with 41.

Chicago outscored Detroit 24-5 over a nine-minute stretch of the third quarter and handed the Pistons their fifth consecutive setback and 11th loss this month, a team record. Chet Walker led the Bulls with 29 points and Detroit's Bob Lanier had 24.

Phoenix blew most of a 21-point lead before holding off Atlanta as Connie Hawkins, Clem Haskins and Neal Walk all scored 21 points. Walt Bellamy of the Hawks had 27 and Lou Hudson added 23.

Buffalo overtook Cleveland on Walt Hazzard's 15-foot shot with five seconds left. The winning basket gave Hazzard a game high 26 points. Austin Carr topped the Cavaliers with 23.

Saturday's scores: Boston 124, Detroit 112; New York 110, Seattle 106; Golden State 111, Phoenix 100; Cincinnati 120, Cleveland 118.

KU, Cornhuskers Risk League-Leading Marks

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Defending champion Kansas and Nebraska were deadlocked today for the Big Eight Conference basketball lead but it may not remain that way very long.

The two teams risk their 4-1 records Tuesday night against clubs tied for third place. Nebraska is back home against Kansas State, and Kansas hits the road to battle 20th-ranked Missouri.

Only one game is scheduled tonight, a nonconference clash involving the Oklahoma Sooners, 7-9 over-all, at home against Arkansas State.

Kansas continued its home court domination over Joe Cipriano-coached Nebraska clubs

Saturday night by edging the Cornhuskers 57-55 in overtime.

Nebraska, with possession of the ball, called time with two seconds remaining, and Fred Bosilevsk dived in front of the in-bounds pass and scored at the gun for the only points of the five-minute overtime struggle.

The Cornhuskers have never beaten Kansas at Lawrence, Kan., under Cipriano, who is in his ninth season at the Nebraska helm. Bud Stallworth had forced the game into overtime when he scored for Kansas to make it 55-55 with two minutes left in regulation. Stallworth made 21 points, the same number fired by Nebraska's Chuck Jura.

Missouri, 3-1, whipped Colorado, 1-3, by 79-67. Kansas State, 3-1, tripped Oklahoma, 3-2, 70-58. Iowa State, 2-4, slipped by Oklahoma State, 0-7, 75-72 in a regionally televised afternoon tilt.

Missouri's triumph ruined a 28-point performance by Jim Creighton of Colorado. Ahead by one point with 9:40 left, the Tigers hit 10 straight points with John Brown getting six of them. Al Eberhard got 19 points and 19 rebounds for the Bengals.

David Hall masterminded the Kansas State conquest of the Sooners. He contributed 19 points and grabbed 20 rebounds. Bobby Jack's 16 points led the Sooners, who bowed late in the game when Kansas State went on a 10-1 scoring spree.

Iowa State led Oklahoma State by nine points at the half only to have the Cowboys tie the game four times thereafter. Finally, a three-point play by Eric Heft with a minute left decided the issue. Clint Harris made 16 points for the Cyclones but the Cowboys' Ralph Rasmussen was top scorer with 23.

This week's remaining schedule:

Tuesday — Kansas at Missouri; Kansas State at Nebraska.

Saturday — Missouri at Kansas State; day; Kansas at Iowa State; Colorado at Oklahoma.

Dinsdale Not Pleased

S-C Mark at 11-7

"We are going to have to play a lot better this weekend," said Smith-Cotton High School basketball coach Jim Dinsdale Monday morning.

Dinsdale, who was somewhat critical of his team's offensive play in Saturday night's 59-46 victory over Independence Truman in a non-conference battle, was looking ahead to the Tigers' two upcoming weekend dates in Jefferson City with the Jays (Friday night) and a Saturday night home date with Columbia.

Smith-Cotton, winners of their last six games and nine of their last ten, boosted their season's record to 11-7 with Saturday night's victory.

However, Dinsdale was not at all pleased with his team's performance. "We kept putting the shot up before we worked out patterns," he said Monday. "We'll have to be a lot more careful against Jefferson City and Columbia."

Smith-Cotton's shot chart showed that they sank only 21 of their 62 attempts for a meager 34 per cent from the field.

Sam Snead Wins Seniors Tourney

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP)—Sam Snead picked up $4,000 and his fifth PGA Seniors Golf Tournament Sunday when he shot a final-round 71 for a 72-hole total of 286 and a one-stroke victory over Julius Boros and Tommy Bolt.

The 59-year-old Slammin' Sammy trailed by three at the beginning of the round, but it was all tied up when Snead, Bolt and Boros reached the 18th green.

Boros, 51, and Bolt, 53, bogied the par 4 hole, but Snead reached the green in two, rolled a 40-foot putt to within 18 inches of the pin and dropped the fourth shot for par and victory.

Boros, the defending champion, and Bolt, who won the event in 1970, earned $2,500 each for their second-place tie.

Truman wins behind them, Dinsdale set out to prepare for the two upcoming Central Missouri Conference engagements.

"Jefferson City is getting better every game," the Tigers' mentor said. "They may have lost three of their four league games, but that was early and they're really starting to jell."

Jefferson City had won five straight games before their Saturday night, 79-66, loss to Kansas City Manual. At one time their overall mark was 2-8, but they are now only two games under .500 at 7-9.

In Saturday's victory for the Tigers, Kim Anderson tossed in 18 points and pulled down 22 rebounds to lead S-C in both departments. Sophomore forward Jim Sanders added 17, while Steve Herzberg netted 13; Herzberg also had 20 rebounds to his credit.

Steve Sweetland and Steve Hatfield were the only Truman players in double figures with 21 and 10 respectively.

Memphis State Will Attempt To Stop Cards

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Memphis State tries to do something Wednesday night about Louisville's bid to make a runaway of the Missouri Valley Conference basketball race.

The No. 4 ranked Cardinals are 5-0 and Saturday survived perhaps their poorest effort of the year.

Louisville overcame Bradley's slowdown game 52-46 in a televised matchup.

Memphis State owns a 4-1 MVC mark and the Tigers stand the best chance to halt the Louisville landslide. St. Louis is 2-3 while Wichita State is 3-3.

The Memphis State-Louisville contest will be on the Cardinals' home floor before what is expected to be a sellout crowd.

Dennie Crum, Cardinals coach, said he was relieved to defeat Bradley considering his team's sloppy play.

"We did not play particularly well . . . but maybe it's good we got a bad game out of our system," Crum said.

Louisville owns the best overall record in the league 15 wins against a lone loss.

In fact, Valley contenders have an excellent 60-20 record against outside foes.

In other conference games this week, Wichita State is at Bradley and Tulsa is at St. Louis Thursday night.

On Saturday, Wichita State is at St. Louis, Drake is at Louisville, and Bradley is at Tulsa.

SAPPORO (AP) — Austrian ski officials were prepared today to appeal the disqualification of Karl Schranz, Austria's former world skiing champion, from the 1972 Winter Olympic Games.

"I can't believe it," said Dr. Karl Heinz Klee, president of the Austrian Ski Federation, after the 33-year-old Schranz was disqualified by the International Olympic Committee for allowing his name to be used for commercial reasons.

"We'll launch any appeals that are possible against this," added Klee.

French ski officials also were upset at the shocking ruling.

Maurice Martel, president of the French Ski Federation, called the decision "very deplorable" and demanded a meeting of his group to discuss the situation.

"I proposed in St. Moritz to both the Austrians and the Germans that we should withdraw our ski teams from the Sapporo Winter Games if only one of our skiers is disqualified," said Martel. "But they merely said it was a good idea and very laudable, but no decision was reached."

There have been reports that Schranz, who was preparing to compete in his fourth Olympics, was earning $40,000-$50,000 a year from his ski connections. The Austrian did not deny them, but he contended he was being punished for a crime of which all athletes are guilty.

"The Russians are subsidized by their own government and all international athletes get help from one source or another," he said.

"It's an emphasis on the wrong principle. I think the Olympics should be a contest of all sportsmen with no regard for color, race or wealth."

"If Mr. Brundage (IOC President Avery Brundage) were not a millionaire, he might have a different viewpoint."

The 84-year-old Brundage had threatened to take action against any Olympic competitors, primarily skiers, who had broken Olympic regulations by receiving payments from commercial firms.

Gomez Enters Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Lefty Gomez used to watch airplanes and throw jet propelled strikes. Ross Youngs flew around the bases. Will Harridge guided the American League through a fast-paced era.

The three are the newest members of baseball's Hall of Fame. It took only a vote by the Veterans Committee Sunday to place their names among the sport's immortals.

Gomez, the pitching pride of the New York Yankees during the 1930s who did his best when the chips were down, was the most glamorous name of the trio unanimously selected by the 10-man oldtimers' committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Youngs was reckless runner in the Ty Cobb mold and a switch-hitting stylist with the old New York Giants. Harridge was president of the American League for a record 28 years.

The veterans committee, meeting in conjunction with the annual dinner of the New York chapter of the BBWA, vote on players and officials who have been out of the game for 20 years.

Gomez, whose given name was Vernon, long carried the "Lefty" appellation for his southpaw-slanted blazers, never lost a World Series game in six decisions during his golden years, 1931-8.

His obvious talents, which fashioned a fancy 189-102 lifetime mark, were sometimes overwhelmed by legend.

Gomez was most remembered for his airplane-watching penchants while at work. The colorful pitcher used to stop games and gaze at aircraft until they left the Yankee Stadium vicinity.

He was also known for his dry wit, spoken with deadpan delivery. Once asked the secret of his success, Gomez replied without cracking a smile:

"Clean living, a fast outfield and Johnny Murphy."

Gomez referred to the relief pitcher who often bailed him out of jams during his 14-year career, all but one of the seasons with New York. Before he finished up with the Washington Senators in 1943, Gomez had led the AL in winning percentage two years, in earned run average twice, in strikeouts once and one time in shutouts.

Youngs compiled a .322 lifetime batting average and his reckless running game threw scares into opposing infielders before his untimely death at the age of 30.

He died of Bright's Disease in 1927, a year after he completed his 10th season with a .306 mark.

Youngs, nicknamed "Pep" for his liquid motion on the basepaths and in the outfield, scored 100 or more runs for three straight seasons and twice was in the 200-hit circle. He stole 153 bases in his career.

Harridge served as a major league president longer than any man. The American League Leader from 1931 to 1959, Harridge died last year.

Harridge's greatest contribution to the changing scene involved the All-Star Game. The idea for the Dream Game was conceived by the Chicago Tribune, but it never would have become a reality without the dignified, soft-spoken AL president.

He sold the idea to owners and then the National League agreed to go along with the proposal.

Rinker's 34 Points Leads So. Carolina

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer
Here come South Carolina's Gamecocks, loaded as usual. And the big shot is a Tommy gun.

Displaying typical, fast-breaking firepower, Frank McGuire's 11th-ranked basketball team clouted No. 19 Northern Illinois 83-72 Saturday night behind Tom Riker's 34-point blast.

"It was another great night for Riker," said McGuire.

It certainly was. Riker, who scored 42 points to help South Carolina whip Fordham in New York last Thursday, made 15 of his 22 field goal attempts against Northern Illinois.

The blazing shot-making gives him 34 of 43 in the last two games, a little better than 80 per cent from the field.

While McGuire boosted his top gun he also awarded team superlatives.

"This is the second tremendous victory on the road trip," exulted McGuire. "The Fordham win was great, but this one was better."

"Northern Illinois is a tremendous basketball club. They used every defense in the book and hurt us with their press in the second half. They also had the home crowd advantage."

South Carolina earned its victory before a noisy crowd of 16,000 at Chicago Stadium in the first game of a double-header. Marquette, the nation's second-ranked club, defeated Loyola of Chicago 69-67 in the second game.

Top-ranked UCLA clobbered outmanned Notre Dame 57-32; fourth-rated Louisville tripped Bradley 52-46; No. 5 North Carolina smashed No. 18 Maryland 92-72; Michigan trimmed No. 6 Ohio State 88-78; seventh-ranked Southern Cal lost to Santa Clara 83-73; No. 9 Penn crushed Princeton 82-59; No. 10 Florida State clouted Florida Southern 84-63 and No. 15 Hawaii trounced Redlands 84-50 in other top games.

Third-ranked Long Beach State saw action Sunday and bowed to the University of Pacific 104-86. The setback was the 49ers' first ever in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

Long Beach State, 16-2, had won 25 straight PCAA games—13 this season—without a loss since the conference's inception in 1968-69. The 49ers still are first in the league with a 5-1 record, however, while the Tigers are 4-1 and 12-6 overall.

Pacific's victory was its 34th in a row at home. The Tigers bolted to a 20-2 lead and never were headed. Bernard Dulaney and John Errecart scored 26 points apiece for the winners. Ed Ratleff topped the losers with 43.

Marquette put on a full-court press to erase a seven-point halftime disadvantage and the Warriors had to scrap all the way to beat Loyola's upstarts.

"We were fortunate to win," said Marquette Coach Al McGuire. "We played well in the second half and I think we're starting to find ourselves. Everyone thinks that we should win by 25 or 30 points, but it's not in the cards. We're not that good."

UCLA shrugged off Notre Dame's stall-ball tactics to win its 16th game this year, the 31st over two seasons and the 161st in the last 166 outings.

Louisville also dealt with a slowed-down game, although not as exaggerated, to beat Missouri Valley Conference colleague Bradley.

"We feel a team can't stay with us physically," said Louisville forward Ron Thomas. "They try to run with us, they're going to get beat and if they try to stall, they're going to get beat."

Robert McAdoo scored 20 points to lead fast-breaking North Carolina over Maryland's tough Terrapins.

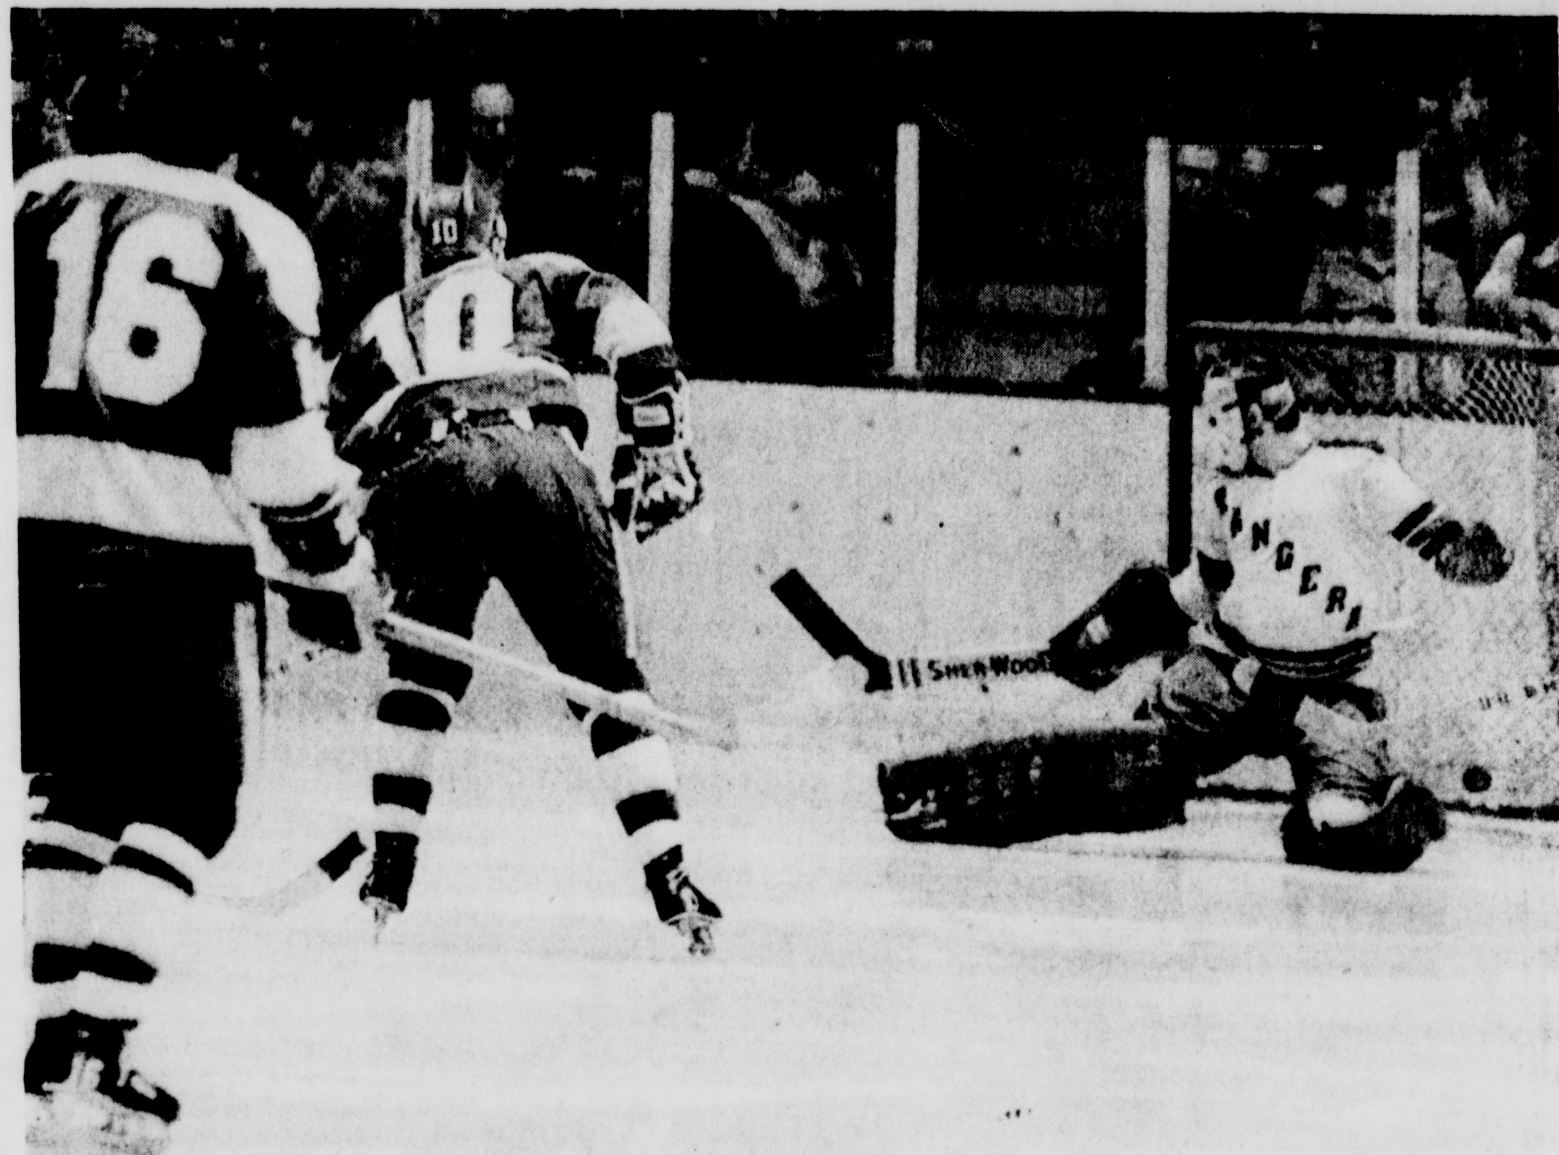

"Maryland is a very dangerous team," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "I feared that Maryland would out-rebound us, and they did. They had a lot more possessions but still we were able to win."

Henry Wilmore scored 26 points, including eight straight in a crucial second-half drive, to help Michigan stun Ohio State, which was playing without injured Luke Witte and Mark Wagar.

Mike Stewart, the No. 4 field goal percentage shooter in the country, scored 18 points to lead Santa Clara over Southern Cal.

Corky Calhoun scored 24 points as Penn moved into a tie with Princeton for the Ivy League lead and Ron King and Otto Petty combined for 39 points to pace Florida State.

In other games No. 13 Brigham Young walloped Wyoming 101-74; No. 14 Marshall defeated Morris Harvey 78-68; No. 16 Minnesota scored a 61-50 victory over Iowa; and No. 20 Missouri turned back Colorado 79-67.

Bruins Blast Blues' Rookie

Stephenson's Debut Is Rough

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There probably are easier tasks for a 27-year-old accountant than counting the goals he gives up in his National Hockey League debut.

The figures dancing in front of Wayne Stephenson's eyes Sunday were 1-2-3-4-5. That was the number the Boston Bruins popped past the rookie in his NHL debut. Unfortunately, Stephenson's teammates, the St. Louis Blues, only managed to score 1-2.

Elsewhere, Gilles Meloche, who posted his first big league shutout earlier in the season against the Bruins, notched his second straight whitewashing as California turned back Vancouver 2-0. Meloche also blanked Toronto on Friday night.

The New York Rangers were held to a 1-1 tie by Minnesota and fell six points behind Boston in the East Division. Chicago downed Detroit 4-2, Philadelphia zeroed Pittsburgh 4-0 and Los Angeles tied Buffalo 2-2.

Saturday's scores: Boston 4, Philadelphia 2; Minnesota 4, New York 2; Chicago 4, Pittsburgh 2; Montreal 4, St. Louis 0; Vancouver 5, Toronto 2 and Los Angeles 4, Detroit 4.

Stephenson, who was brought up by the Blues Jan. 1 and is officially still an amateur, held the Bruins scoreless through one period, but they erupted for four goals in the middle session. The outburst included shorthanded goals 35 seconds apart by Bobby Orr and Derek Sanderson.

"You've got to start somewhere," philosophized Stephenson when asked how he felt about making his debut against the red-hot Bruins, who are unbeaten in 10 games. "There's no sense being nervous about it. You just go out there and do your best. The Bruins are a real good shooting club. You might as well learn from the best."

California's Meloche got the only goal he needed from Stan Gilbertson at 2:08 of the first period. Gilbertson then set up Walt McKechnie's insurance tally with 2:12 left in the game.

Bobby Rousseau scored for New York in the second period but Murray Oliver's power-play goal midway through the final stanza ruined Ed Giacomin's shutout bid and extended Minnesota's unbeaten string to seven games.

Despite their streak, the North Stars dropped 11 points behind Chicago in the West Division when goals by Darryl Mags, Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull rallied the Black Hawks over Detroit.

Philadelphia goalie Bruce Gamble posted his second shutout as the Flyers snapped a four-game losing streak against Pittsburgh. Jean Guy Gendron and Bobby Clarke staked the winners to a 2-0 first-period lead.

Kaysinger Roundup

No Conference Activity

There are no league games in the Kaysinger Conference this week, but non-league cage action will be building up to a crescendo for the Feb. 11 meeting between Sacred Heart and LaMonte on the latter's home court.

This week's schedule finds five of the league members competing in the annual Smithton Tournament, which gets underway tonight with two first-round contests.

At 7 p.m., first-seeded Sedalia Sacred Heart meets Green Ridge; the 8:30 p.m. game features LaMonte, second seeded, meeting Lincoln.

Tuesday night's action finds fourth-seeded Calhoun taking on Leeton at 7 p.m. The concluding first-round contest features host Smithton tangling with third-seeded New Franklin at 8:30 p.m.

LaMonte and Sacred Heart remain undefeated in conference activity, with 6-0 and 5-0 marks respectively. Their meeting on Feb. 11 could well decide this year's conference champion.

Stover is in second place with a 4-1 standard, while Warsaw is the only other Kaysinger Conference team with a 500 or better record at 3-3.

Stover leads the volleyball standings at 5-0, while Cole Camp and Northwest are deadlocked in second at 4-1 each.

First Win Since 1965

Harney Ends Drought

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Will sudden success lure Paul Harney back to a full shot at the rich pro golf tour and its $7.5 million in purses up for grabs this year?

"No," said the smiling gray-haired 42-year-old veteran who collected $30,000 for his victory in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open Sunday.

"I'm not tempted. I have no ambition to go back on the tour."

Harney, who birdied the final hole for a one-stroke victory over struggling young Hale Irwin, is a club pro in Sutton, Mass., and now plays only about 10 tournaments a year. He was on the tour on a full-time basis for almost a decade before taking the job at Pleasant Valley Golf Club.

Harney, who hadn't won since 1965, had a final-round 70 over the warm and sunny Torrey Pines Golf Club course and finished with a 13-under-par total of 275.

Irwin, 26, appeared to have the tournament in his pocket when he made the turn three strokes in front. But he played the back nine in 39—including a disastrous three-putt bogey on the 15th—and slipped to a par 72 and 276. He won $17,100.

"He deserved to win it more than I did," Irwin said of Harney.

Veteran Gardner Dickinson had a 68, despite three putts on the final green, for third at 277. Australian Bruce Crampton was alone in fourth with a 72 for 278. Miller Barber, winner of last week's Tucson Open, Canadian George Knudson, Dave Eichelberger and Bert Yancey followed at 279.

Jack Nicklaus, who had won five of six starts going into this one, was well back at 285, tied with Takashi Murakami, the crewcut little Japanese golfer who had a share of the lead at the end of 36 holes. Lee Trevino took a final 74 for 292, beating only eight players.

Harney, dubbed "the Silver Fox" by his competitors, was playing about two holes in front of Irwin and appeared to be out of it when they finished nine holes.

But Irwin bogeyed two of the next three holes and dropped back into a tie with Harney when he three-putted from 10 feet on the 15th, missing the second from 18 inches.

"It was a shock," said Irwin, who stared at the ball in frustration and dismay for a moment before putting out. "There were a lot of spike marks around the hole. I hit the putt just right. If I had to do it over again, I'd hit it and play it just the same way."

College of Emporia Stays in Top Spot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

College of Emporia continued its dominance of the Heart of America Conference, boosting its league lead with a 97-77 victory over Graceland at Emporia Saturday night.

Earlier in the week, Emporia topped Ottawa 82-79 after dropping a non-conference game to Oklahoma Christian 99-82.

William Jewell gained an undisputed hold on the runner-up spot with victories over Tarkio, 64-60, and Central Methodist 86-71.

Emporia is now 7-1 in the conference and 14-6 for the season. William Jewell is 6-2 and 11-5.

Ottawa, despite its loss to the league leaders, moved into a tie for fifth place with Baker University at 3-5, by defeating Baker 66-62 Saturday night. Tarkio is third with a 5-3 record and Central Methodist is fourth at 4-4.

Pick Up Duane Thomas On Marijuana Charge

DALLAS (AP) — Duane Thomas, the running back who let his ball-carrying speak for him as he led the Dallas Cowboys to the National Football League championship, was up against a new adversary today.

Thomas, 24, and his younger brother Bertrand, 21, were arrested near Greenville, Tex. Sunday and charged with possession of marijuana, a felony.

Officers searching for a stolen automobile allegedly found two bags of marijuana in a car being driven by the Dallas star.

The pair was released on bond of $5,000 each, posted by a Greenville lawyer, Larry Green, after spending about six hours in custody.

Highway Patrolman Wendel Jeter and Deputy Sheriff Norman Gray arrested the Thomas brothers about 12 miles west of Greenville on Interstate 30 as they looked for a stolen car similar to the luxury model Thomas was driving.

While looking inside the car for its engine number, Gray said, he smelled marijuana smoke. Further search turned up two bags of the weed.

MSHSAA Sets Indoor Dates

COLUMBIA — The Missouri State High School Activities Association announced Monday that the State High School Indoor Track and Field Meet will be held at the University of Missouri, March 24-25. Class S and M will compete on March 24, while the Class L schools will vie on the following day.

The defending Class S champion is Springfield Greenwood; in Class M, East Prairie is the defending team champion, while Kansas City Central was the Class L winner in 1971.

Klan Official Arrested During 'Hair'

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Four Tulsa men, including the grand dragon of the Oklahoma Ku Klux Klan, were hustled by security guards from the stage of the musical "Hair" Sunday night after they attempted a citizens' arrest of the cast during a nude scene.

The men contended the performance violated eight city ordinances, including laws against obscenity, profanity, sexual innuendo and perversion.

But city prosecutor Jack Morgan refused to authorize police officers to enforce the Klansmen's arrests on grounds the federal courts had ruled no such laws were violated by the production.

"I'll be damned if we're going to pick out isolated parts of it in the city of Tulsa and prosecute for it," Morgan later told a reporter.

The Klansmen, including Grand Dragon Lloyd French, Donald A. Burris and Charles E. Baker—left the theater peacefully but with security guards at their side. Police identified the other man as Richard Robinett.

"He's spineless," Burris said of the prosecutor. "He's failed to follow through on our laws."

the short-haired man said as he rapidly cited to reporters just what laws had been broken by the cast and where they could find them in lawbooks.

The men were seated about 10 rows from the stage of the city-owned theater, and the lights had just dimmed for the nude scene. About 12 cast members stood nude facing the audience.

The four jumped from their seats, rushed down the aisle for the stage during the 15 seconds the cast members stood naked. Burris grabbed a microphone off the stage while Baker followed the cast members off-stage.

At that point, the house lights were turned on. It was a regularly scheduled intermission.

Burris, standing center stage, announced to the audience of approximately 2,000 the four men were making a citizens' arrest. The other two, including French, stood on the stage.

About a third of the audience rose to their feet and booed and hissed the men on the stage.

"All those who stood up and booed were the long-haired, hippie-types," Burris later said.

Baker, who said he was an attorney, had then caught up with the cast members offstage and grasped the shoulders of one of the nude women, Debbie Ortega of Redwood City, Calif.

She said he announced, "You're under arrest. This is a citizens' arrest."

The woman said she was momentarily stunned, then told Baker: "You can't take me in—I'm nude. I don't have any clothes on."

She said Baker then let go of her as security officers pushed their way through the other cast members and crowded around the two.

The four men left the stage flanked by blue-uniformed security officers. Two police detectives in plainclothes were nearby.

They made their way through the crowd, many of whom were getting up from their seats because of the 15-minute intermission.

One Tulsa detective spoke with prosecutor Morgan by telephone, and said Morgan told him not to arrest anyone.

The four men were then escorted out of the theater. Burris was carrying a camera and microphone, and Robinett had a tape recorder partially concealed under his coat.

Burris said he had taken seven or eight photographs and made a "full recording" to use as evidence in prosecuting the case.

Angered at the city prosecutor's refusal to file charges against the cast, the four said they would ask the district attorney to file state charges on Monday.

The woman Baker grabbed also talked of charges. Dick Grayson, company manager, indicated the possibility assault charges against Baker would be studied.

He was also concerned about the Klansmen's taking of photographs and the tape recording. He said it was an apparent violation of copyright laws.

When it was announced late last year that "HAIR" would play to a Tulsa audience, two members of the city commission tried to block it—Police Commissioner Brad Scheer and Street Commissioner Joseph Coleman.

Both said they were concerned about the nudity and alleged desecration of the American flag in the production. But they were outvoted by Mayor Robert J. LaFortune, Finance Commissioner William Morris and Water Commissioner Anthony Keating.

St. Louis (AP) — A businessman now in jail for defrauding the federal government of $6 million has placed the money in a bank and is earning interest on it, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has reported.

In its Sunday editions the Post said shortly after his commitment to a federal jail in Pennsylvania, Andrew L. Stone, 55, arranged for St. Louis Union Trust Co. to hold the money pending the outcome of government legal action to recover it.

The article by Washington correspondent Curt Matthews said unnamed sources at the Department of Justice acknowledged the existence of an escrow agreement with Stone but declined to give details.

An interest rate of 5 to 6 per cent on the money would mean it has been drawing about $350,000 a year.

Stone was president of the Chromcraft Corp. of St. Louis, which produced rocket launchers for jet fighters. He pleaded guilty in Feb. 1970, to charges of fraud through kickbacks, false invoices and secret shipments.

St. Louis (AP) — A dinner speech by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., attacking the Nixon Administration, topped activities Saturday at a day-long Democratic seminar sponsored by St. Louis County's Democratic Central Committee.

Policies of the Nixon Administration "stand for a package that people won't buy — recession, reaction and retreat," said Humphrey, who's campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"We must demonstrate to the American people that we Democrats care, that we can lead, that we can make the 1970's not a period of despair and hard times, but a period of prosperity for all and of dynamic domestic development for our nation," he said.

Humphrey was the only contender for the nomination to attend the first annual Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Seminar.

Several months ago Symington, Hearnes and Eagleton publicly endorsed the candidacy of Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine. Symington said he attended because Humphrey was a personal friend.

During the day Democrats at the seminar held meetings on politics and important goals for the party during this year's general election campaigning.

Rep. James W. Symington of St. Louis County said the United States must learn to avoid involvement in all the world's problems. But he said solving American problems cannot be done without spending money.

"If we're going to build this country, we are not going to do it with decreased taxes," the congressman said.

Mayor A. J. Cervantes of St. Louis called for cooperation between rural and urban residents. "So often it appears that people in the city and the coun-

Excesses Difficult to Correct

NEW YORK (AP) — If the country has learned anything from the economic excesses of the late 1960s, it is that they're easy to commit but 10 times harder to correct.

This is indicated tacitly in the President's economic report to Congress and the annual report of the Council of Economic Advisers. The statements are optimistic, as they must be. But they are also restrained, based on recognition of past defeats and a future unknown.

True, the President set as a goal a Gross National Production growth of 9.8 billion, which is something like creating in one year an economy the size of Canada's, but he still made no promises on employment and inflation.

Those two viruses seem to be immune to everything tried—and just about everything has been tried. And so, where the rhetoric might have been termed "confident" a year ago it seems now to be merely "realistic."

That is, the administration now seeks to get the jobless rate down to the neighborhood of 5 per cent by the end of 1972 from its present 6 per cent. But last year's report saw it going even lower—in 1971.

Inflation is expected to average about 3.25 per cent for the year, but this obviously is just a goal, based on the administration's statement that controls will remain indefinitely.

More realism is seen also in the manner in which the administration arrived at the GNP forecast of $1.145 trillion. It does not, for example, rely heavily on a boom in consumer spending, which has long been forecast.

Last year, if you remember, the administration overstated the GNP by $18 billion, based partly on that expected resurgence of consumer spending. Since the result was hardly a surge, tax revenues fell shorter than forecast.

There is restraint also in the administration's expectations of business spending. In fact, the council lists as a major uncertainty the chance that business, also fearing that consumers aren't ready to splurge, won't spend heavily to build inventories.

In short, the elusiveness of stability, the experience of having overstated its expectations a year ago, and doubts about the ability of any policy to produce quick changes, temper the outlook.

This year's goals are a bit less definite in time and substance. "Will" appears to be replaced by "determined." Specific figures on inflation are hedged by "in the neighborhood of" and "reasonable price stability."

The snowy owl lives in the barren tundras of the American, Asiatic and European Arctic.

The expectation that has taken hold of the economy in the past half decade or more is that prices and wages will always be higher. Since a race has been declared, the only way to stay in place is to run all the harder—to raise prices if you are a businessman, to demand higher wages if you are an employee.

These ersatz expectations now must be replaced by realistic goals. This the administration knows, because last year it committed the biggest, most damaging error of expectation of all.

No grand thrust, it is now realized, will fell the demon. Only patience and persistence.

Machinists Support Walkout

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Heavy support for a strike against the McDonnell Douglas aerospace firm has come from members of District 837 of the Machinists Union.

But president Cosimo Troia said after the vote Sunday a strike is at least a week away. A Department of Defense policy requires unions to give seven-day notice before striking companies working under its contracts. Troia said he would delay giving the week's notice if it appears the company is willing to negotiate further.

The Machinists represent about 1,000 McDonnell Douglas employees. They voted against an offer providing an 8 per cent wage boost in the first year of the three-year contract.

The average base rate of union members now is $4.40 an hour. In the third year the average wage would be $5.20 plus cost-of-living increases.

The old three-year contract expired at midnight Sunday.

Rejection of the company offer raised the possibility of an election to determine which union will represent McDonnell workers.

An employee group called Technical Employees of Aerospace Manufacturers (TEAM) lost a bid for an election late last year when it failed to get enough signatures on petitions.

But with no contract TEAM can again petition for an election.

"If they have a sufficient number of signatures, we will not object to an election. We are confident members will retain District 837 and we want to get the thing over as soon as possible," Troia said.

Earning Interest In Fraud

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A businessman now in jail for defrauding the federal government of $6 million has placed the money in a bank and is earning interest on it, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has reported.

In its Sunday editions the Post said shortly after his commitment to a federal jail in Pennsylvania, Andrew L. Stone, 55, arranged for St. Louis Union Trust Co. to hold the money pending the outcome of government legal action to recover it.

"If we're going to build this country, we are not going to do it with decreased taxes," the congressman said.

Mayor A. J. Cervantes of St. Louis called for cooperation between rural and urban residents. "So often it appears that people in the city and the country live in different worlds. We all know this not the case," he said.

Others who spoke during the seminar included Rep. Richard Ichord of Missouri and Senator Symington.

"After World War II we had all the gold; we had the bomb; nobody else had either. I think there are many men operating today who believe this is still the case," Stuart Symington said.

Marvin Madeson, national chairman of the New Democratic Coalition, called for unity among Democrats. Without unity, he said, "no matter what happens now and election day, they can't win." Before his speech, Humphrey met with high school and college editors in a no-holds-barred question session.

Humphrey said he is against legalizing marijuana, but he thinks penalties for its use are too stiff, and should be reduced.

"I'm asking all new voters who think something should be done about their country to do something about it — to act, not merely talk," Humphrey told the youngsters.

Louis Harris Survey

More Optimistic About Economy

By LOUIS HARRIS

After a sustained and extended period of deep pessimism, there are now signs that the American people feel the country may be on the road to economic recovery.

Here are some results from the latest survey which paint a less gloomy public outlook toward the economy in 1972.

—For the first time since 1969, less than a majority of Americans feel the country to be in a recession. Although a plurality believes a recession still persists, 49 to 33 per cent, pessimism is down substantially from the 65 to 21 per cent peak in March of last year.

—For the first time in over a year, the number of persons who say they feel that prices are rising more rapidly than 12 months before has also dropped below the 50-per cent mark. Although 47 per cent of the public still report a sense of continuing inflation, this is 26 points below the 73 per cent who felt the same way last March.

—The number of Americans who say that unemployment in their immediate vicinity is still increasing has diminished from a high of 70 per cent last July to a current 43 per cent, a 12-month low. Psychologically at least, it appears that some of the bite of unemployment is softening.

Perhaps the most dramatic developments have taken place in the overall assessment of the public about the country being in a state of recession.

A cross section of 1,991 households was asked between Dec. 28 and Jan. 4.

“Do you feel the country is in a recession today or not?”

	Is %	Is Not %	Not Sure %
January, 1972	49	33	18
December, 1971	54	30	16
November	56	27	17
September	55	26	19
August	62	24	14
July	62	25	13
May	63	23	14
March	65	21	14
January, 1970	56	23	21
November, 1970	62	24	14
July	58	26	16

Although public pessimism began to turn around with the initial announcement of President Nixon's wage-price freeze in September, it is apparent after the passage of time that hopes for economic recovery are gaining slowly but steadily.

There may be significance in the fact that pessimism about a recession did not dip below the 50-per cent mark until the public at the same time began to sense that inflationary pressures had abated. The pocketbook pinch still hurts, but there is a growing sense that the pace of inflation has slackened since last summer.

Repeatedly, cross sections of the public have been asked:

“Do you feel the prices of most things you buy are rising more rapidly than a year ago, about as rapidly as they were then, less rapidly than a year ago, or are they going down?”

	Up, More Rapidly %	Up, as Rapidly %	Up, less Rapidly %	Down %	Not Sure %
January, 1972	47	33	16	1	3
November, 1971	53	30	13	1	3
September	64	28	6	—	2
August	69	25	4	—	2
July	70	24	5	—	1
May	72	20	6	—	2
March	73	22	4	—	1
January	65	28	5	1	1

Similar declines have taken place in the perceptions of the public concerning unemployment in their own home area. repeated cross sections have been asked:

“Compared to a year ago, do you feel the number of people unemployed around here has increased, decreased, or has stayed about the same?”

	In- creased %	De- creased %	Stayed Same %	Not Sure %
January, 1972	43	9	38	10
December, 1971	43	14	34	9
October	47	6	40	7
September	47	7	39	7
August	58	6	31	5
July	70	5	22	3
May	65	4	25	6
March	62	4	29	5
January	62	5	27	6

Compared to a year ago, there has been a 19-point drop in public feelings that the local job situation was worsening. However, the reports of actual lay-offs on a family-by-family basis indicate little abatement in actual unemployment since May, a trend also borne out in official federal unemployment statistics, although percentages in the latter are calculated on a different basis.

During most of 1971, the American people remained unimpressed by claims from Administration economists that recovery was on the way. Now the public perceives some slowdown in the rates of inflation and increasing unemployment, although still feeling the pangs of the cost of living and the job cutbacks experienced by a substantial minority of American families. The most important ingredient of recovery is the spark of public confidence. The first glimmer of hope deserves careful watching, because, once ignited, the possibility always exists of a sudden surge of economic optimism.

Agriculture Department Conducts Racial Survey

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is looking at 14 million faces and family names to see if people who get government food benefits are black, brown, red, yellow or white.

Millions of others, who share in USDA benefits ranging from farm subsidies to federal jobs, also are being classified and their names fed into computers as grist for the government's civil-rights mill.

Much information has been gathered since mid-1971, but a full report is not expected until July. Meantime, the biggest job involves the food-stamp and commodity-distribution program.

A report on the racial make-

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Personnel of the Joplin Gas Service Co. continued today the job of lighting the last of the pilot lights in homes and businesses as the city recovered from a gas leak which left much of the area without heat for two days.

Frank Cook, company district manager, said 325 personnel worked on emergency repairs over the weekend.

Restoration of service began Saturday afternoon, a day after a valve ruptured in a Cities Service Gas Co. pipeline north of here. Some 75 per cent of the city's 16,500 gas meters had to be closed off.

Emergency shelters were set up in schools, and many people left the city to stay with friends or in motels in neighboring cities.

Police Chief Bernard J. Kaskus said the crisis had been met smoothly, adding that a few people might even have profited from the break.

“We had a few gentlemen going from house to house in the affected areas trying to sell electrical heaters,” he said. “They had bought heaters for $18.59 and had taken them apart and made two heaters out of each one. They were trying to sell these new heaters for $29.95. A $40 profit.”
